WEALTH

in 1968) in "We Do Our Part," things started falling apart with Vietnam, when college deferments separated the country, and continued in the war's wake when wealth became more important than service. Today, doctors that come from the one percent and don't have the debt load will join other one-percenters in fancy places across the country. Our Wallowa County docs want to be here for the reasons that ole Doc Sharff wanted to be here — fishing, hiking, mushrooms, community. And Larry Davy, like most of us, could make more money elsewhere, chooses to live in the county because it's still a place where generosity and service are more important than wealth.

Main Street columnist Rich Wandschneider directs the Alvin M. and Betty Josephy Library of Western History and Culture housed at the Josephy Center for Arts and Culture, located in Joseph.

Oregon printmakers exhibit opens April 1 at Josephy Center

The Josephy Center will host an opening reception on April 1 at 7 p.m. for the new exhibit "Oregon Printmakers: From the Collection of Christy Wyckoff." The reception will include a cocktail party and art demonstration stations where visitors can produce their own prints. There will also be a ribbon cutting for the new classroom and ceramics studio, which was recently completed at the Josephy Center.

Fine art prints can be made a number of different ways. Etchings, linocuts, wood blocks, lithographs, screen prints, and monoprints, for example, each give artists distinct challenges and opportunities for expression.

"The Wyckoff collection includes a variety of methods and artists," said Cheryl Coughlan, Executive Director at JCAC. "This will be a chance for visitors to see superb prints and also learn about how they are made. We hope this is Step One in creating a print studio for Wallowa County artists who will share a special press and print-making tools."

For this show, Christy Wyckoff has chosen a few of his own prints as well as those of other collaborators and friends. Wyckoff grew up in Eastern Oregon and spent his summers with grandparents in Wallowa County. He received his MFA from the University of Washington and taught printmaking at the Pacific NW College of Art in Portland for over 30 years. He will be giving a Live & Up Front presentation at the exhibit's closing reception on May 26. The reception begins at 6:30 p.m., with Wyckoff's presentation at 8 p.m.

Wyckoff's printmaking, painting, and photography have appeared in museum exhibitions including The Plates: International Contemporary Print Art at the Tokyo National University of Fine Arts and Music; One of a Kind: Monotypes from the Permanent Collection at the Portland Art Museum; Waters Edge: Landscapes by Contemporary Northwest Artists at the Maryhill Museum of Art; What's Happening: Contemporary Art from California, Oregon and Washington at the Alternative Museum, NYC; and In Touch: Nature, Ritual and Sensuous Art from the Northwest at the Portland Center for Visual Arts.

Fishtrap receives $7,000 state grant

Dozens of arts groups, including Fishtrap, were recently awarded Arts Build Communities grants from the Oregon Arts Commission.

Across the state, nonprofit art groups were awarded a total of $210,400, with Fishtrap receiving $7,000 for The Big Read event featuring Tim O'Brien's "The Things They Carried."

The grants are awarded to groups who have projects to address social issues.

O'Brien's book informed and inspired discussion about war, veteran's issues and PTSD.

Now in its 21st year, the Arts Build Communities program targets broad geographic impact and arts access for under-served audiences. More than half of the 2017 awards go to communities outside of the Portland Metro region.

Arts Build Communities grants frequently serve as seed money to spur additional local support. In recent years Arts Build Communities projects attracted more than $570,000 in leveraged funding, much of it used to pay artists as well as to purchase products and services in the funded communities.
