

For President: WILLIAM MCKINLEY of Ohio. For Vice-President: THEODORE ROOSEVELT of New York.

JEFFERSONIAN IMPERIALISM.

Mr. Bryan's efforts to bolster up his opposition to retention of the Philippines by citing Jefferson as an opponent to this system of ignorance of our political history or expose him as a demagogue who believes the people are unfamiliar with the acts of Mr. Jefferson's administration.

Soon after Jefferson took possession of the territory of Louisiana, duly appointed and authorized representatives of its inhabitants presented to the senate of the United States an able and formal remonstrance against the political system adopted by congress for their government.

Protesting against the form of government which had been provided for them, the remonstrance said, "A single magistrate, vested with civil and military, with executive and judiciary powers, upon whose laws we have had no check, over whose acts we had no control, and from whose decrees there is no appeal, the sudden suspension of all those forms to which we had been accustomed; the total want of any permanent system to replace them; the introduction of a new language into the administration of justice; the perplexing necessity of using an interpreter for every communication with officers placed over us; the involuntary errors, of necessity committed by judges uncertain by what code they are to decide, wavering between the civil and the common law, between the forms of the French, Spanish, and American jurisprudence, and with the best intentions unable to expound laws of which they are ignorant, or to acquire them in a language they do not understand. These were not light inconveniences, nor was his state of things calculated to give favorable impression or realize the hopes we entertained; but we submitted with resignation, because we thought it the effect of necessity; we submitted with patience, though its duration was longer than we had been taught to expect; we submitted even with cheerfulness, while we supposed your honorable body was employed in reducing this chaos to order, and setting a system of harmony from the depth of this confused, discordant mass.

"Uninformed as we are supposed to be of our acquired rights; as necessary for us to demonstrate that this act does not 'incorporate us into Union,' that vests us with none of the rights, gives us no advantages, and deprives us of all the immunities of American citizens. "A governor is to be placed over us who we have not chosen, whom we do not even know, who may be ignorant of our language, uninformed of our institutions, and who may have no connection with our country or interest in its welfare.

"Taxation without representation, an obligation to obey laws without any voice in their formation, the undue influence of the executive upon legislative proceedings, and a dependant judiciary, formed, we believe, very prominent articles in the list of grievances complained of by the United States, at the commencement of their glorious contest for freedom. The opposition to them, even by force, was deemed meritorious and patriotic, and the rights on which that opposition was founded were termed fundamental, indefensible, self-evident, and eternal. These were the sentiments of your predecessors; were they wrong? Were the patriots who composed your councils mistaken in their political principles? No, they are not wrong.

"Are truths, then, so well founded, so universally acknowledged, inapplicable only to us? Do political axioms on the Atlantic become problems when transferred to the shores of the Mississippi? or are the unfortunate inhabitants of these regions the only people who are excluded from those equal rights acknowledged in your Declaration of Independence, repeated in the different state constitutions, and ratified by that of which we claim to be a member? "The American colors are hoisted in our garrisons, this far famed signal of liberty to all, to us alone exhibits a gloomy appearance, and makes us more sensible of the immeasurable interval between us and political happiness. May we not long be doomed, like the prisoners of Venice, to read the word liberty on the walls of prisons."

Scalp Bounty.

A person would not imagine that in the course of a year the number of scalps taken from coyotes and wildcats in the state of Oregon would reach nearly 46,000. When one stops to think of it and realizes that Oregon is the birthplace of such a number of varmints, he is pretty likely to think that civilization has hardly got a foot-hold yet. Secretary of State W. I. Dunbar has completed compiling the statement showing the number of scalps delivered to the respective county courts since May 6, 1899, when the scalp bounty law went into effect, each one of which scalps (of coyotes, wildcats, etc.) costs the state $2, when the proper certificate is filed in the state department. The statement shows that 45,826 scalps have been delivered and paid for by the state, from May 6, 1899, to September 30, 1900, costing the state $91,652. To pay this the special sheep tax was levied by the legislature, but thus far less than $1,000 has been paid into the fund from the several counties, and the state's paper is out for the amount represented by 45,000 scalps, being practically the only debt of the state of Oregon. Douglas county has sent 560 scalps, 75 of them during the last quarter.
