A CASE OF SMALLPOX IN TOWN

Stranger Has the Disease in Very Mild Form.

Mr. Arthur Kroenig, a young man recently arrived from Wisconsin is confined in the city pest house with smallpox.

He has been in Corvallis about two weeks having come from Eugene to this place. He was employed at the mill of Strong & Co., and roomed at the Farmers' Hotel. He began breaking out a week or ten days ago, but thinking it was only a rash he went about his work and appeared on the streets until his face was completely broken out. Chief of Police Lane saw him upon the street and took him to Dr. Farra, who pronounced it a clear case of smallpox but only of a light form. The young man declared that it was eczema and that he had it about this time each year. Dr. Farra thought otherwise, however, and he was taken back to his room in the Farmers' Hotel and quarantined until Friday night when he was taken to the pest house just outside the city limits on the road to Albany. The description given in reliable medical treatise of smallpox and kindred diseases leaves no doubt as to the genuineness of his case. Chickenpox is often confounded with smallpox but there is a distinct difference and anyone may ascertain this for himself. Chickenpox breaks out first and is confined mostly to the body appearing sometimes also on the hands and face. Smallpox breaks out first on the forehead and spreads downward over the face and is particularly noticeable on the fingers. Chickenpox eruptions contain a watery substance called serum and when pricked with a pin will completely collapse. Smallpox eruptions contain a yellowish substance called puss and the prick of a pin will not make them change their shape. Chickenpox eruptions are mostly upon the surface. Smallpox eruptions are more deeply seated. Anyone can try this for himself if he be in doubt as to the real thing. The best way is to stay away from the whole thing. Eruptions break out in about 14 days after exposure. Although not dangerous in this form, it nevertheless, may result in serious consequences if those exposed are suffering from other diseases. A sure preventative is a drink made by mixing a teaspoonful of cream of tartar in two quarts of water. This is also useful in bringing about a regular and rapid recovery.

Took a Short Vacation.

Albert, the fifteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wyatt, who are wealthy farm owners, about two miles west of Corvallis, disappeared from the Newton school house last Wednesday noon. When he left he bade some of the scholars good-bye. It is reported that he chafed under a reprimand given him last Wednesday by his teacher for not being able to do a sum in arithmetic. He disappeared so suddenly and effectively that it caused no little consternation and mathematical thought on the part of the teacher. At 12:30 o'clock men working on the telephone line saw a boy going towards Corvallis that answered to his description and after that all trace of him was lost until word was received from his aunt, Mrs. Connor, 275 Montgomery St., Portland, that he was there.

When Albert failed to come home that night his father started a search which traced him from Corvallis to Albany and from there to the home of his aunt in Portland. It was found that he had walked moneyless and hungry from Corvallis to Albany a distance of ten miles. He took the 4:30 blind baggage at Albany and turned up at his aunt's at 10 o'clock the same night. He jumped out of Portland on Thursday and went to Perrydale where he has sisters living. Word was received by his father Saturday that his boy was found. With singular cunning the youngster evaded the efforts of his aunt to learn the reason of his flight from home. To all questions he gave indefinite answers. He was brought back Sunday.

Placed in Aid Society.

Eva May Hurt, of this city, another of Creffield's victims was taken to the Boys and Girls Aid Society at Portland one day last week, where it is thought the change of surroundings may be of benefit to her.

The reward now offered for the arrest of Creffield is about $400, but it is very probable he will never be caught. So completely secretive are his followers that no clue whatever can be gained as to his whereabouts. The damage he has done, however, could be repeated by his many followers. He might wholly disappear, yet the evil would continue to spread. The main idea of the sect is the effacement of all natural functions. If the idea once becomes established in the mind that such a thing is possible, many well-meaning people are apt to be led astray, particularly those who are very conscientious and are possessed of a sensitive religious nature.

Business House Changes Hands.

The business house of J. D. Mann & Co., house furnishers, will change hands in the near future, probably this week. The transfer so far as the articles of agreement are concerned is completed, the invoice is taking place at the present time and the new firm will take possession as soon as the invoice is completed. The purchasing parties are Messrs. Cady and Hollenberg, both of this city. The deal was accomplished through the real estate firm of Ambler & Watters. Mr. Cady has lived in Corvallis about three years, coming here from Nebraska and has been employed at the college. Mr. Hollenberg has just recently arrived from the East. He is possessed of ample means and being a fine gentleman has had considerable experience along business lines. The new firm will be known as Hollenberg & Cady. The transfer has been contemplated for some time, owing partly to the illness of Mrs. Mann's mother who lives in Salem. Mr. Smith also, the other member of the firm is interested in a real estate deal in Eastern Oregon which necessitates his giving up his present position.

The firm of J. D. Mann & Co. is widely and favorably known in Linn, Benton and Lincoln counties. An immense business was being transacted by the firm especially during the last six months. The new firm has purchased only the furniture and carpet departments, the stove and tinware department will be closed out as soon as possible.

Corvallis is loath to part with the retiring firm, Messrs. Mann & Smith, with whom it was always a pleasure to transact business.

Philomath College.

On Tuesday evening the music and elocutionary department gave an interesting program. It was opened with a duet by Gertrude Weed and Wayne Mulkey. Other features of the evening were renderings by Andrew Whitten, Oscar Weed and others interspersed with music. The music class showed thorough preparation and advancement. At the close an artistic pantomime was given by Maud Angell.

Wednesday evening was in charge of the literary societies. The program was highly instructive as well as entertaining. Ernest Castle gave a soliloquy which was appreciated by all. Maud Angell's readings showed careful preparation. The Zetaeagatheans quartette sang several selections. The program closed with a paper which was listened to most eagerly. The societies deserve praise and commendation, as this was a sample of the work they have been doing throughout the year.

On Friday evening occurred the Class Day exercises. At the hour appointed a fine class of 18 took their places on the platform, and Miss Weed opened the programme with a well prepared piano selection. Special mention is due Miss Mason who gave a well prepared class poem, and to Miss White as valedictorian. The Ladies Quartette gave a couple selections. Mr. Moore, of Corvallis, delivered the baccalaureate sermon to a full house. The text "What is man that Thou art mindful of him" was well handled and the address to the class thoughtful and timely. In the evening Rev. McDonald, of Eugene, delivered the address at the anniversary of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. Mr. McDonald made happy reference to the beginning of the Christian Association movement showing how much has been accomplished. The address was logical and clear while the delivery was pleasing. Philomath College is justly proud of Mr. McDonald as one of her sons.

Prof. J. B. Horner to Lecture

The Ministerial Association of Southern Oregon has arranged for a course of lectures on Oregon literature at Ashland, Medford, Jacksonville and a number of other towns in that part of the state. Prof. J. B. Horner, of the Oregon Agricultural College, who has written and lectured on the subject more than any other person, has been chosen to give the lectures, commencing June 19. Before Davenport, Mrs. Dye or Charles Markham had obtained note the professor had stated in his first book on the subject that Oregon had produced more genuine literature in 50 years than all the other 13 colonies had in a century and a half. He has implicit faith in the growth of the literary west. It is his belief that had Massachusetts at first planted as many universities, colleges, academies and free schools as there have been in the Willamette valley she would have outdone England in the maturity and finish of her literary output decades ago.—Albany Herald.
