MOUNTAIN STORM

The atmosphere is saturated with electricity, and everything betokens a storm. I enjoy a mountain storm if it occurs in the summer time.

The wind sprang up and howled and the trees were whistled by time and storms. Across the country were pine, fir, spruce and hemlock trees.

One time I happened to be with a party camping away up on the side of Mt. Adams, in a canyon, that was destitute of trees, with the exception of fallen ones that were whitened by time and storms.

The wind carried the clouds to the east and leaves of maples and quaking aspen hurried after. Birds went flying higher and higher searching for a secure resting place.

That night we had rain and lightning; thunders rolled and dashed against the rugged sides of the mountain up there until all nature seemed to be in a tumultuous fury.
