Morrow County's New Judge

Thos. W. Ayers, of this city, who was appointed county Judge of Morrow county to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge A. G. Bartholomew, received his commission of appointment Monday evening, and took the oath of office Tuesday morning, and is now presiding over the affairs of Morrow county.
This is an appointment that will meet with general approval by Morrow county citizens, and is truly a case where the office sought the man, for no one was more surprised than Mr. Ayers when his name was mentioned. It was entirely unsolicited by him, and when asked to take the important position, the matter was taken under serious advisement before an answer was given.
While Mr. Ayers has always been an uncompromising democrat he has never entered into politics and has at different times refused good positions offered him at the hands of his party.
Mr. Ayers is an honored pioneer of Morrow county, and is now the oldest pioneer residing within the present boundaries of the county. His residence here dates away back from '62, coming here when the country was a wilderness, inhabited by Indians.
For over 40 years he has been identified with Morrow county interests and well understands the affairs of the county. It is unnecessary to say that county affairs will be safe in his hands. He has always been successful with his own affairs and is a man of good judgment.
Mr. Ayers was a heavy loser by the flood and no man has worked harder than he has to get onto his feet again. While he is very energetic and progressive, he is also conservative and careful.
Uncle Tom naturally feels proud over the honor and we all feel proud with him.
If you take this paper and The Weekly Oregonian you won't have to beg your news.
