"Dera Deane," "The English Orphans." "Homestead on the Hills'de," "Lens Rivers," "Meadowbrook," Tempest and Sunshine," "Consin Maude," etc.

CHAPTER XVIII .- (Continued.) How chatty and social he was, trying to cheer Maddy up and make her forget that such a thing as death had so lately found entrance there; talking of Jessie. of Aikenside, of the pleasant little time they would have during the vacation, and of the next term at school, when Maddy, as one of the graduating class, would not be kept in as strictly as heretofore, but allowed to see more of the city. Maddy felt as if she should die for the pain tugging at her heart, while she listened to him and knew that the pictures he was drawing were not for her. Her place was there; and after the breakfast was over and Flora had cleared the dishes away, she shut the door, so that they might be alone, and then standing before Guy, she told him of her resolution, begging of him to help her and not make it harder to bear by devising means for her to escape what she felt to be an imperative duty. Guy had expected something like this and was prepared, as he thought, to combat all her arguments: so when she had finished, he replied that of course he did not wish to interfere with her duty, but there might be a question as to what really was her duty, and it seemed to him he was better able to judge of that than herself. It was not right for her to bury herself there while her education was unfinished, when another could do as well. Her superior talents were given to her to improve, and how could she improve them in Honedale; besides her grandfather did not expect her to stay. Guy had talked with him while she was asleep, and the matter was all arranged; a competent woman was to be hired to take charge of the domestic arrangements, and if it seemed desirable, two should be procured; anything to leave Maddy free.

'And grandpa consented to this willingly?" Maddy said, feeling a throb of pleasure at thoughts of release. But Guy could not answer that the grandfather consented willingly.

"He thinks it best. When he comes eack you can ask him yourself," he said. At this point Grandpa Markham came m, and to him Guy appealed at once to know if he were not willing for Maddy to return to school.

"I said she might if she thought best." was the reply, spoken so sadly that Maddy's arms were at once twined around the old man's neck, while she said to "Tell me honestly which you prefer. I'd like so much to go to school, but I am not sure I should be happy there, knowing how lonely you were here at home. Say, grandpa, which would you rather now, honor bright?" and Maddy tried to speak playfully, though her heart-beats were almost audible as she waited for the answer. Grandpa could not deceive. He wanted his darling sorely, and he wanted her to be happy, he said. Perhaps they would get on just as well without her. When Mr. Guy was talking it looked as If they might, he made it all so plain, but the sight of Maddy was a comfort. She was all he had left. Maybe he shouldn't live long to pester her, and if he didn't wouldn't she always feel better for having stayed with her grandpa?" He looked very pale and thin, and his hair was white as snow. He could not live many years, and turning resolutely from Guy, who, so long as he held her eyes, controlled her, Maddy said:

"I've chosen once for all. I'll stay with grandpa till he dies," and with a convulsive sob she clung tightly to his neck, as if fearful that without such hold her resolution would give way.

It was in vain that Guy strove to change Maddy's resolution. She was wholly decided, and late in the afternoon he rode back to Aikenside, a disappointed man, with, however, the feeling that Maddy had done right, and that he respected her all the more for withstanding the temptation.

CHAPTER XIX.

It was arranged that Flora should for the present at least remain at the cottage, and Maddy accepted the kindness gratefully. She had become so much accustomed to being cared for by Guy that she almost looked upon it as a matter of course, and did not think of what others might possibly say, but when, in as delicate a manner as possible, Guy suggested furnishing the cottage in better style, even proposing to modernize it entirely in the spring, Maddy objected at once. They were already indebted to him for more than they could ever pay, she said, and she would not suffer it. So Guy submitted, though it grated upon his sense of the beautiful and refined terribly, to see Maddy amid so humble surroundings. Twice a week, and sometimes oftener, he rode down to Honedale, and Maddy felt that without these visits life would hardly have been endurable.

During the vacation Jessie spent a part of the time with her, but Agnes resolutely resisted all Guy's entreaties that she would at least call once on Maddy. who had expressed a wish to see her, and who, on account of her grandfather's health, and the childishness with which Uncle Joseph clung to her, could not well come up to Aikenside. Agnes would not go down, neither would she give other reason for her obstinacy than the apparently foolish one that she did not wish to see the crazy man. Still she did not object to Jessie's going as often as she liked, and she sent by her many little delicacies from the larder at Aikenside, some for grandpa, but most for Uncle Joseph, who prized highly everything coming from knew she must. the madam," and sent back to her more than one strangely worded message which made the proud woman's eyes overflow when sure that no one could see her. But this kind of intercourse came to an end at last. The vacation was over, Jessie had gone back to school, and Maddy began in sober earnest the new life before

Those were dark, wearisome days to Maddy, and when the long, cold winter was gone from the New England hills, and the early buds of spring were coming up by the cottage door, the neighbors began to talk of the change which had ome over the young girl, once so full of ife and health, but now so languid and pale. Still Maddy was not unhappy, nor was the discipline too severe, for by it she learned at last the great object of life; earned to take her troubles and cares to one who helped her bear them so cheerfully that those who pitied her most never ireamed how heavy was her burden, so patiently and sweetly she bore it. Occasionally there came to her letters from the doctor, but latterly they gave her less pleasure than pain, for as sure as she read one of his kind, friendly messages of sympathy and remembrance, the l'empter whispered to her that though he did not love him as she ought to love her husband, yet a life with him was far preferable to the life she was living, and the receipt of one of his letters always gave her a pang which lasted until Guy ame down to see her, when it usually disappeared. Agnes was now at Aikenside, and thus Maddy frequently had Jessie at the cottage, but Agnes never came and Maddy little guessed how often the proud woman cried herself to sleep after listening to Jessie's recital of all Maddy had to do for the crazy man, and how patiently she did it. He had taken a fancy that Maddy must tell him stories of Sarah, describing her as she was now, not as she used to be when he knew her. but now. "What is she now? How does she look? What does she wear? Tell me, tell me!" he would plead, until Maddy, forced to tell him something, and having distinctly in her mind but one fashionable woman such as she fancied Sarah might be, told him of Agnes Remington, and Uncle Joseph, listening with parted lips and hushed breath, would whisper softly, "Yes, that's Sarah, beautiful Sarah: but tell me-does she ever think of me, or of that time in the br chard when I wove the apple blossoms in her hair, where the diamonds are now? She loved me then; she told me so. Does she know how sick, and sorry, and foolish I am?-how the aching in my poor, simple brain is all for her, and how you Maddy, are doing for me what it is her place to do? Had I a voice," and the crazy man now grew excited, as, raising himself in bed, he gesticulated wildly, "had I a voice to reach her, I'd cry shame on her, to let you do her work, let you wear out your young life and fresh, bright beauty all away for me, whom she ruin-

The voice he craved, or the echo of it, did reach her, for Jessie had been present when the fancy first seized him to hear of Sarah, and in the shadowy twilight she told her mother all, dwelling most upon the touching sadness of his face when he said, "Does she know how sick and sorry I am?" The pillow which Agnes pressed that night was wet with tears, while in her heart was planted a germ of gratitude and respect for the young girl doing her work for her. All that she could do for Maddy without going directly to her, she did, devising many articles of comfort, sending her fruit and flowers, the last new book, or whatever else she thought might please her, and always finding a willing messenger in Guy. He was miserable, and managed when at home to make others so around him. The sight of Maddy bearing her burden so uncomplainingly almost maddened him. Had she fretted or complained he could bear it better, he said, but he did not see the necessity for her to lose all her spirit or interest in everything and everybody. He smothered his impatience, and determining to help her all he could, rode down to Honedale every day, instead of twice a week, as he had done before. Attentions so marked could not fail to be commented upon; and while poor, unsuspecting Maddy was deriving so much comfort from his daily visits, deeming that day very long which did not bring him to her, the Honedale gossips, of whom there were many, were busy with her affairs, talking them over at their numerous tea-drinkings, discussing them in the streets, and finally at a quilting, where they met in solemn conclave, deciding that, "for a girl like Maddy Clyde it did not look so well to have so much to do with that young Remington, who, everybody knew, was engaged to somebody in England."

The wife of Farmer Green, Maddy's warmest friend in Honedale, did her best to defend her against the attacks of those whose remarks she well knew were caused more by envy than any personal dislike to Maddy, who used to be so much of a pet until her superior advantages separated her in a measure from them. Good Mrs. Green was sorely tried. Without in the least blaming Maddy, she, too, had been troubled at the frequency of Guy's visits to the cottage. Accordingly, next day she started for the cottage, which Guy had just left, and this, in her opinion, accounted for the bright color in Maddy's cheeks and the sparkle in her eye. Guy had been there, bringing and leaving a world of sunshine, but, alas! his chances for coming ever again as he had done were fearfully small, when, at the close of Mrs. Green's well-meant visit, Maddy lay on her bed, her white, frightened face buried in the pillows, and herself half wishing she had died before the last hour had come, with the terrible awakening it had brought; awakening to the fact that of all living beings, Guy Remington was the one she loved the best-the one without whose presence it seemed to her she could not live, but without watch she now

What was life worth without Guy, and why had she been thrown so much in his way; why permitted to love him as she knew she did, if she must lose him now? Maddy could not cry; there was a tightness about her eyes, and a keen, cutting pain about her heart as she tried to pray for strength to do what was rightstrength to cast Guy Remington from her heart, where it was a sin for him to be; and then she asked to be forgiven for the wrong she had unwittingly done to Lucy sure, and to lose Guy now, after these years of cruel waiting, would kill me."

Going to the table she opened her portdied on Calvary," Maddy's answer was a gasping cry as she fell fainting on the

"It was only a nervous headache," she at Uncle Joseph's call, and helped her it might be added that there is scarcerather be alone."

So Flora left her there, but went often o her door, until assured by the low breathing sound that Maddy was sleeping at last. "I can't see him, Flora," Maddy said, when the latter came up with the message that Mr. Remington was there with bilities ahead. Describing the 900 cohis buggy, and asked if a little ride would operative organizations of peasants in not do her good. "I can't see him, but Ireland which he was instrumental in give him this," and she placed in Flora's establishing for the purpose of compehand the note, baptized with so many tition with commercial industries, forctears and prayers, and the contents of which made Guy furious-not at her, but at the neighbors, the inquisitive, envious, meddlesome neighbors, who had dared to talk of him, or to breathe a suspicious word against Maddy Clyde. He would see; he would make them sorry for it; they should take back every word; and they should beg Maddy's forgiveness for farmer, for instance, to purchase everythe pain they had caused.

All this, and much more, Guy thought, as with Maddy's note in his hand, he walked up and down the sitting room, raging like a young lion, and threatening vengeance upon everybody. He must see her; he would see her; and so for the next half-hour Flora was the bearer of written messages to and from Maddy's what you are doing here, brought sciroom; messages of earnest entreaty on the ence into farming by getting it into the one hand, and of firm denial on the other, schools. They had the same system of At last Maddy wrote:

"If you care for me in the least, or for my respect, leave me, and do not come again until I send for you. I am not insensible to your kindness. I feel it all: but the world is nearer right than for cigar wrapping, was first raised in you suppose. It does not look well for Connecticut from seed brought from you to come here so much, and I prefer that you should not. Justice to Lucy requires that you stay away."

"You shall be obeyed. sprang into his buggy, and Maddy, listen-heard him as he drove furiously away. Those were long, dreary days which followed, and but for her grandfather's increasing feebleness Maddy would almost have died. Anxiety for him, however, kept her from dwelling too much upon herself, but the excitement and the care wore upon her sadly, robbing her eye of after year when saved under bog. The its luster and her cheek of its remaining name Uncle Sam Sumatra was given bloom, making even Mrs. Noah cry when to this variety. It is a cigar wrapper she came one day with Jessie to see how variety of tobacco and adapted for

Mrs. Noah's tears kept company with hers. Not a word was said of Guy, except when Jessie told her he was in Boston, and it was stupid at home without

With more than her ordinary discretion, Flora kept to herself what had passed when Guy was last there, so Mrs. Noah | inches in length, alknew nothing except what he had told though the size varies her, and what she read in Maddy's white, suffering face. This last was enough to excite all her pity, and she treated the young girl with the most motherly kindness, staying all night, and herself taking care of grandpa, who was now too ill to sit up. There seemed to be no disease preying upon him, nothing save old age, and the loss of one who for more than conditions. The percentage of the best forty years had shared all his joy and sorrow. He could not live without her, and one night, three weeks after Guy's dismissal, he said to Maddy, as she was

if you are not too tired. Your grandmother seems near me to-night, and so does Alice, your mother. Maybe I'll be with them before another day. I hope I may if God is willing, and there's much I would say to you."

Escaped Two Kinds of Death. lightning route for mine, every time," estimate the value of the sugar at 416 declares Michael Chisham, who was cents per pound, the 967,224,000 pounds knocked off a roof by a shock from a of sugar manufactured were worth high-power wire, "Never knew what $43,525,080, Probably the assumed struck me. There was a buz-z-z-z, like prices both for beets and for sugar may you hear in a planing mill, only dreamy be a trifle below those actually receiv and sweet like pretty music. Then I ed, but these figures are sufficiently seemed to be having a delightful sail, accurate to indicate the magnitude of Then I woke up in the hospital with the industry. roof."

ropean countries.

Atherstone, who trusted her implicitly, and who, in her last letter, had said: "If I had not so much faith in Guy I should be jealous of one who has so many opportunities for stealing his heart from me, but I trust you, Maddy Clyde. You would not do a thing to harm me, I am folio, the gift of Guy, and with her gold pen, also his gift, wrote to him what the neighbors were saying, and that he must come there no more; at least only once in a great while, because if he did, she could not see him. Then, when this was written, she went down to Uncle Joseph, who was calling for her, and sat by him as usual, singing to him the songs he loved so well, and which this night pleased him especially, because the voice which sang them was so plaintive, so full of woe. Would he never go to sleep, or the hand which held hers so firmly relax its hold? Never, it seemed to Maddy. who sat and sang, while the night-bird on a distant tree, awakened by the low song. crept on to midnight. Human nature man said to her, "Now sing of Him who instruction and experimentation sup-

That ended it. That roused up Guy's pride, and writing back :

ing, with head and heart throbbing alike, they were getting on. Maddy was glad to see her, and for a time cried softly on her bosom, while about to leave him : "Sit with me, darling, for a little while,

(To be continued.)

my burned hands done up, and they told me I had fallen off the gas-house

Chisham had a remarkable escape nearly full grown, but that have not from two kinds of death. He and a yet ripened enough to send to market. companion were sent to make repairs I have picked such tomatoes and put on the gas-house roof in Bangor, Me. them in a cool, dark place to ripen Chisham knew that there were high- slowly and sent them to market when power wires on the roof, and to keep the supply had run low and prices run his comrade out of danger took the high, says a writer in New England risky end of the job. He made a slip Homestead. But for home use a bets and touched a wire carrying 12,000 ter way is to pick the smaller ones volts. Instantly he was seen to fall, from the vines and then hang up the roll down the roof to the other, nearly branch in the cellar, darkening the flat, and bound thence to the ground, windows and keeping the place cool He was picked up unconscious, but rai- They will ripen slowly, and one may lied in a short time, and except for indulge in ripe tomatoes in January, bad burns on his hands was uninjured, when those grown in a hothouse and

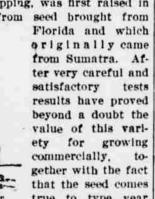

Spain is the sunniest of all the Eu-

Value of Co-Operation. Sir Horace Plunkett, member of the attered a responsive note, and the hours British house of parliament, who has been in this country recently, said in sould endure no more, and when the crazy an address to agricultural students that there was "not a single county. not a parish, in Ireland where the farmers are not completely revolutiontzing the entire business of farming by said to the frightened Flora, who came introducing co-operative methods." And young mistress up to bed. "She would be ly a farming district in the United better in the morning, and she would States where more benefits canont be realized by a closer co-operation of the farmers. The farmers are understanding each other better each year and are coming closer together in all matters which pertain to their mutual interests, but there are still greater possiing out middlemen, compelling railroads to provide better facilities, and dictating more favorable legislation to parnament, done: "The first thing was to introduce a system of agricultural education which extended into every branch of the industry, teaching the thing he requires, implements and machinery, of the very best quality. They combined to consign in bulk and distribute their goods in the market. They combined to raise working capital for their operations. They combined to

> New Variety of Tobacco. A new variety of tobacco, valuable plied by your government."

own breeding animals. They did just

THE PLANT. true to type year

will average about sixteen inches in width by twenty according to field and cultural conditions. The yield of the crops of this variety is high, being as much as

1,600 pounds of cured THE LEAF. tobacco to the acre under favorable grades of wrapper in these crops is correspondingly high.-Exchange.

Value of Beet Sugar Products. Some idea of the magnitude of the beet sugar industry in the United States can be given by estimating the value of the beets sold by the growers to the factories and of the refined sugar placed on the market by the factories last year.

If we assume that the average price paid for beets in 1906 was $5 per ton. the total value of the 4,236,112 tons of

Ripening Green Tomatoes.

Often when frost comes there are many tomatoes on the vines that are not as large or any better flavor are selling at 25 cents a pound or more. Try It.

Wintering Cabbage. One of the simplest ways of keeping some sheltered place, often alongside the venom through minute openings in a fence which has been made tight by them. In striking its prey (for whata liberal use of straw. The cabbages ever charm the serpent may employ to are stored with their stems on and are get its victim within easy reach, it replaced head down and as close together lies upon the venom to give the coup as possible. Two or three tiers are de grace), these fangs may often be often made, the heads of the second broken, and nature has provided a full tier being placed between stems of the supply of reserve weapons, which lie lower, and so on, the piles being made dormant in the gums, and which within of any width and length desired. The two weeks will develop and replace the whole is covered with leaves, salt grass hay or straw and a little soil, rails, brush or litter. Small unsalable heads and frequently sell as well as any in stored by plowing out two or three furrows ten or twelve inches deep on a well drained site and placing the heads feet high, bringing them to a point. and then several inches of soil. They are stored before freezing, and when the soll covering them is frozen it may be covered with strawy manure or any other litter to keep the soil frozen until the cabbages are needed for sale.

An Electric Incubator. Electricity has been applied to incubation by Otto Schultz, an electrician of Strassburg, and is the result of three years of experimentation. The apparatus is made for 50, 100 or 200 eggs, and is designed to obviate the difficulties connected with the ordinary form of incubator. The manipulation of the apparatus is very simple, and its maintenance depends only upon an uninterrupted supply of electricity.

An automatic attachment keeps the temperature within one-tenth of a degree of the normal temperature of incubation. The degree of saturation of the air is kept in the same manner. Under ordinary conditions, ninety chickens can be counted on out of 100 eggs incubated. The quantity of electicity required is very small, for an incubator holding fifty eggs, ten to twenty watts being sufficient, depending upon the temperature of the outer air. For raising the chickens after they are hatched, an electric "mother" has been devised. The upper part is devoted to the freshly hatched chickens, while the lower part is arranged so that the chicks can run around on the ground and at the same time find heat and protection when they desire. The electric incubator has already proven very successful.

Test Seeds at Home.

The Department of Agriculture in order to aid farmers to determine for themselves without much trouble the growing under shade in the cigar wrap- germination value of seeds has issued per producing regions. The plants a short bulletin on the subject. A very reach an average height of about eight simple apparatus for sprouting seeds feet at the time of maturity, and they is described. It consists of a shallow bear an average of about twenty-six basis in which is placed a small flat of leaves before topping. The cured leaves porous clay. The seeds, after having been soaked, are laid between two sheets of moist blotting paper or flannel. A pane of glass covers the dish, which should be kept in a temperature of about 70 degrees. Atmosphere of an ordinary living room is suitable if the apparatus is left near a stove at night. Several kinds of seeds may be tested at once at a trifling cost. The bulletin cautions the farmer against extremes of heat or moisture.

> Fertilier Teszts with Corn. Fertilizer tests with corn in Virginia show clearly that plowing under green leguminous crops is a highly beneficial practice and that where this is followed only moderate amounts of fertility will be necessary to give increased yields. When vegetable matter is lacking, however, heavy applications of fertilizer seem advisable.-Andrew M.

> > Farm Gleanings.

There is no standard for judging the guinea fowl. They should, however, be I don't see what he will do if they keep "If I have got to be killed, it's the beets harvested is $21,180,560. If we of uniform shape, great activity and on. And he has it so in the back of reasonably good producers of eggs. Their entire egg crop is produced in him and rubbed him till I've been about summer.

> Bitter cream comes from keeping ream too long from cows that have been milked since early last spring. It is best to churn every few days, even thoung there is only a small churning on hand.

> In setting out the new fruit trees be sure and leave plenty of space between them. You must make allowance for the growth of the years. Crowded trees interfere with one another and have their fruit bearing possibilities checked. The potato storeroom must be dark, cool, well ventilated and dry. There > should be a double floor beneath where large quantities are piled together. There should also be opportunities for ventlation at the walls, and at intervals through the pile.

A good condition powder, to be fed in limited quantities to the brood sow, is composed of a teaspoonful each of copperas, sulphur and a half cupful of oil elected king of Norway by the Storthmeal. Give once each day for each sow ing on November 18, 1905. weighing 250 pounds. It is needless to say that all tonics should be given only when the animal is out of condition.

RATTLESNAKE FALLACIES.

Serpent Is Dangerous Even After Re moval of Poison Fangs.

Another common misconception which is apt to lead to serious accidents is the belief that a rattler is rendered perfectly harmless, so that it can be handled with impunity, by the removal of its poison fangs. These fangs, two in number, are situated in the upper jaw and lie flat, except when the serpent strikes, when they become erect and the closing of the jaws comcabbage is to store in an orchard or presses the poison glands and injects 'njured fang.

An acquaintance who returned from a hunting trip with twenty-five fullwhen stored in this way in November grown rattlers in a box kept them in will continue to develop during winter his office for two months, confined behind a coarse-meshed wire screen. He February. Small quantities may be handled them most carelessly, as be had extracted the poison fangs, but when shown that each of them had developed a perfect pair of new ones with their stems up as close together there was a sudden rise in the local as possible. Some prefer to lay them snake mortality. One was preserved but one or two thick, while others will and sent to the Bronx Zoo, where it pile them up two to two and a half shortly afterward gave birth to a large litter of young ones, which could easily The pile is then covered with straw, have crawled through the screen besalt grass hay or a thin layer of straw hind which the mother had been kept. As each of them possessed the pelson apparatus in full commission and was without the power to rattle, they would have been even more dangerous than adult snakes.

Professional snakehandlers are often ignorant of this power to quickly replace fangs possessed by rattlers, and this ignorance, says Outing, led to a serious accident to one of them at Bostock's, at Coney Island, last year. He was badly bitten and narrowly escaped death, his recovery being attributed to the generous amount of whisky which was immediately administered to him. which illustrates another mistaken idea. It is a pity to shatter a pleasant illusion, but alcohol, except in very small doses, is harmful rather than beneficial as an antidote to snake-bite

As a matter of fact, although the symptoms of rattlesnake poisoning are most painful and alarming, an adult rarely dies from the bite of the variety common in the North. The diamondbacks of the South attain a much larger size, and consequently inject more venom, and their bite is proportionately more dangerous.

******** THE BALM OF SILENCE.

********

The young woman beside whom Mrs. Lamson seated herself with a jounce smiled at the newcomer, but had no time to speak. "My land," said Mrs. Lamson, "If I wan't thankful when I saw you as I came into this car! Thinks I, 'At least I'll have five minutes' peace'-that's all the time I ride in this car before I make my next

"It's perfectly ridiculous having to change, anyway, just to ride a few blocks. But goodness me! I've forget my transfer, and I couldn't walk the distance, so I ought not to complain. My ankles won't bear me up on the sidewalks since I took on all this extra

"The reason I was so glad to see you-of course I'm always glad-is because I've been riding with that Dobbs woman and I declare I never heard such a talker in all my days! I couldn't get in a word edgewise. And if she said anything, 'twouldn't be so bad, but she doesn't. Just maunders on about the weather and her rheumatism.

"Now we all know the weather isn't anything we can help; we've just got to bear it, however bad 'tis, and, as I tell Josiah, we've had a trial of our patience this year if ever we had. No spring, and then jumping right into heat when we were all unprepared. And rain! Well, there's no use dwelling on it, as I say.

"And when you come to rheumatism, it was real cheeky for her to tell me her symptoms-that's what 'twasanybody that's endured what I have right in my own family! I wish you could see Josiah's knuckles. I tell him his neck and his elbows. I've rubbed dead. And do you know, day before yesterday I had a sharp pain shoot right through my elbow, and I said to myself-Mercy, this is where I change! Good-by, dear! I'm really rested, just riding this little way with you. Good-

Royal Funning.

On their way to Paris recently, King Haakon and Queen Maud, of Norway, passed through Copenhagen. They were received at the railway station by King Frederick, King Haakon's father. A. courtier who was present tells what the monarchs said.

"Well, Haakon," said King Frederck. "how do you like being a king?" "I would rather ask you," retorted Haakon. "I've been a king longer than you." This was quite true. Frederick of Denmark succeeded to the throne upon the death of his father, King Christian, on January 29, 1906, but Haakon was

We never see our way clear to pay eight dollars for an umbrella, either.