SPRING AND WINTER. BY GWEN MEREDITH.

The world buds evey year; But the heart just once, and when The blossem falls off sere No new blossom comes again, Ah! the rose goes with the wind,

Was it well in him, if he Felt not love, to speak of love so? If he still unmoved must be.

Need he say that I was fair, With such meaning in his tone, Just to speak of one whose hair Had the same time as my own? Pluck my life up, root and bloom, Just to plant it on her tomb?

And she'd searce so fair a face (So he used to say) as mine: And her form had far less grace; And her brow was far less fine But 'twas just as he loved then, More than he can love again.

Why, if beauty could not bind him, Need he praise me, speaking low; Use my face just to remind him How no face could please him now? Why, if loving could not move him, Did he teach me still to love him?

And he said my eyes were bright, But his own he said, were dim; And my hand, he said, was white; But what was that to him? For," he said, "in gazing at you, I seem gazing at a statue.

"Yes," he said, "he had grown wise He had suffered much of yore; But a fair grace to his eyes now, Was a fair face and no more, Yet the auguish and the bliss, And the dream, too, had been his."

For the common places spoken? Looks whose meaning seem'd to render Help to words when speech came younger man's wife Why so late in July moonlight Just to say what's said by noonlight?
