THE CITY.

THE DAILY ASTORIAN will be sent by mail at 75 cents a month, free of postage. Readers who contemplate absence from the city can have THE ASTORIAN follow them, DAILY or WEEKLY editions to any post-office without additional expense. Addresses may be changed as often as desired. Leave orders at the counting room.

All times are reported in New Tacoma.

The Muriel went up river Sunday; the Doehra came down.

The Columbia arrived in yesterday with a large passenger and freight list for Astoria.

Chicago has the unenviable notoriety of having the highest death rate of any city in the Union.

The Corvallis Gazette does not like the detention of the Yaquina outside the bar and thinks that it is "peculiar."

D. J. Ingalls leaves this morning for an extended visit to the Eastern States. He expects to be absent two months.

We acknowledge a call from Rev. J. H. Acton, editor of the Polaris, who lectured at the M. E. Church last evening.

The timber supply of Alaska is said to be equal to the entire growth of all the timber bearing regions in the Eastern and Northwestern States.

A Salem paper says that "Dr. H. F. Adams will vaccinate any one that will call at his office for fifty cents." The doctor ought to do a good business.

On the desk of the Occident is a piece of basalt weighing fifteen pounds that was blown on to the light house at Tillamook rock, a height of 120 feet, during a storm on the 20th of last October.

The Central Pacific management has ordered freight room at New Orleans for 180,000 bushels of wheat to be shipped by the Southern Pacific, in March and April. The wheat will be shipped by steamer from New Orleans to Europe.

Our wide-awake Portland correspondent makes mention in his last to hand of the necessity of taking some steps to insure a steady supply of salmon in the Columbia. That something of the kind will be needed "poco tiempo," is evident.

The Anglo-Norman, Alcoa Bay, and Portland went to sea on Sunday; yesterday the Woodhall, River Ganges, Jas. A. Wright and Dunard were taken out. If the weather holds fine six more will be taken out to-day, which will pretty well clear out the list of vessels.

Though the title of Mr. Emerson's essay in the February Century, on "The Superlative," may suggest something abstract and metaphysical, it is said that it will be found to be a practical plea for plainness and truthfulness of statement in conversation and literature. Readers who are also writers will recognize in it a valuable discourse on style.

The local of the Standard says he has been in Tillamook county, and as a lover of truth and a Democrat, he denies the allegation that there are no grog shops there. He distinctly recollects five of stationary character, and one of the most accommodating nature that is kept on a big barge and which drifts about from one end of the bay to the other for the benefit of thirsty mortals who sit on the beach and shake an empty bottle as a signal of distress.

The North American Review will present in its February number, to be published on the 15th of the present month, Part III, of its series of articles on "The Christian Religion." It will be from the pen of Geo. P. Fisher, the eminent professor of ecclesiastical history in the Yale Divinity School, — as thorough a scholar and as able a defender of the Christian faith as this country affords. A powerful presentation of the claims of Christianity is expected.

An Explanation.

Astoria, Jan. 15, 1882.

EDITOR ASTORIAN:
The account of the exercises at the church on the evening of the 13th inst—closing the Teachers' Institute proceedings—as published in THE ASTORIAN of this morning, was made out and furnished for THE ASTORIAN by the chairman of the institute, and not by the secretary, the secretary having requested him to furnish the same and giving permission to append her name as secretary if it might be necessary. This much of explanation seems to be due to the public, who might otherwise possibly think the secretary not very modest in commending the essay delivered by herself that evening, as the account does. She did not do it, nor did she know that I would, or did, or intended to commend it until she saw the account in THE ASTORIAN. In my account, also, I commended the address of Mr. Halloran and the lecture of Prof. Powell more than was published, the editor or some compositor having struck out or omitted several sentences.

Please publish this verbatim, Mr. Editor, and oblige the aforesaid chairman.

HERMANN'S LETTER.

The Secret of D. P. Thompson's Candidacy for Mayor and Simon's Defeat—A Suggestion for Astoria.
(Regular Correspondence ASTORIAN.)
PORTLAND, Jan. 13.

I never knew until two weeks ago, and probably not ten of the three thousand voters who took an active interest in the last city election, know why Mayor D. P. Thompson was a candidate for the municipal executive office against Hon. Joseph Simon. These men had been for years, and are now strong personal and political friends, and I have the assurance from a friend of both gentlemen, that either would heartily support the other in future in a contest for office against a Democrat. When Simon was in the State Senate in the fall of 1880, he wrote, fathered, and had passed a new charter for the city of Portland. It embodied several much needed and sensible measures, but it placed the corporation's political influence in the hands of the Mayor, and there was no secret of Simon's intention to wield that power himself during the three years immediately following. He was the only candidate mentioned. Thompson, who was the incumbent in 1880, did not oppose the new charter; if he did, he certainly did not publicly express such disapprobation. But at the last moment Simon backed out on two sections, which

COST HIM THE MAYORALTY.

They read as follows:
Whereas, the present city officers under the existing law have proved insufficient to maintain the peace and good order of the city, and the enforcement of city ordinances, therefore this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

Provided, however, that no officer to be appointed under this act shall be appointed until the meeting of the Common Council in July, 1881.

This awoke Thompson's wrath because it was a lie. His administration had been marked by honesty, prudence, watchfulness and good order in all departments. He started under the impeachment, and trying his hands so that he could not make an appointment, kept up a constant irritation. He resolved to be revenged by preventing Simon from plucking the fruit from the tree which the ambitious lawyer had planted and nurtured—and he succeeded. No salary is attached to the office; Thompson did not care for the honor warmed over; it took much valuable time from his business, which nets him between $25,000 and $35,000 a year; was a source of continual annoyance, and made many petty enemies without compensation in new friends. He would gladly have kept out of the race, but no one could be found except Thompson who was able to command enough votes from Independent Democrats and Republicans to beat Simon; so he became a candidate. No Democrat could have defeated Simon for Mayor. He was, and still is, popular with his party; has a clean record in political, social and business life, and what is more, the hearty friendship of several strong Democrats who control a considerable number of votes. Mr. Simon is young and has aspirations for an office which neither the city of Portland, nor Multnomah county alone can bestow. He will want a constituency not circumscribed by county lines, but as widespread as the State. He will not find it amiss to paste in his little political scrapbook the above quoted sections of the new city charter, which marked his first defeat in the field of politics, and to take good care that vaulting ambition never again overleap itself.

Astoria needs to be reminded of a gross neglect. She has not made the least exertion to assist nature in renewing the supply of salmon which every year her army of fishermen take from the Columbia. What the fishing interest does for Astoria, no resident of the city need be told. That the supply of fish will continue as large as in former years cannot, in the light of experience on the Sacramento river, be reasonably expected. Every man who has given a thought to the subject knows that an intelligent system of propagation must add to the "run." If any doubts existed on this point heretofore, the recent report of the fish commissioner of California, will set such doubts at rest. The hatchery started by four enterprising men in the Clackamas river a few years ago, was permitted to die for want of financial support. It can be restored for $3,000, and its annual output will be less than $5,000. Co-operation of canner owners, fishermen and business men of your city can result in securing necessary funds. Astoria's direct benefits are larger than those of any five establishments on the river. She should take the lead. She cannot afford by withholding a tithe of the wealth so gained, to jeopard the second greatest interest of Oregon.

The inhabitants of North and Western Oregon, including twelve counties of the State, and embracing the great valley of the Willamette and its forks, enjoy seven months of spring—summer and autumn weather that are almost equal to southern or eastern Oregon. So bright and cheerful weather and so bracing and healthy atmosphere. The five winter months, from November to March, bring a beautiful rain that produces, in due season, an unfailing crop. These rains retard, but do not prevent, labor outside, in any department, and of 150 days of winter, at least a third of them are dry and bright.
