No. 149.

THE NATIVE MICHIGANDER

I have been studying him for a week. About seven o'clock every evening he comes in from his farm and takes a seat beside me on the veranda of the country hotel. No one introduced us. He came stumping along the first evening, flung down his old straw hat and exclaimed:

"Durn my hide if it isn't durned hot!"

I had been roasting all day, and so I struck hands with him at once. He has never asked whether I was the Duke of Sutherland or a railroad switchman, and I have never asked why he didn't cut his hair, shave off his matted whiskers and fix a tin snout in one corner of his mouth to accommodate the flow of tobacco juice.

The native Michigander is a good fellow at heart, but he has his eccentricities.

"Yes, I struck this state over fifty years ago," he said to me the other evening, as he hunted in his hind pocket for his plug tobacco. "I have heard the wolver howl, the b'ars roar and the panthers scream."

"You have, eh?"

"You bet I have! Yes, sir, and I've lived all winter on acorns slept all summer in a tree-top, and walked forty-two miles through the woods to prayer meeting. Say, did you ever live in the woods forty miles from the nearest human hyena, black or white?"

"Never."

"Did you ever go barefoot in the snow four feet deep?"

"No."

"Ever shake hands with the ager right along for 248 days, Sundays included?"

"No."

"Dod rat your pampered countenance, of course you never did. What did you ever do to make Michigan the great and glorious state she now is?"

"Well, I've run a lawn-mower!"

"Run a thunder to blazes! How many acres of forest do you suppose I've cut down?"

"Two."

"Two! Why, you onery hyena, my old woman has slashed down over that for herself, and she's left handed, at that. I calkerlate, sir—I solemnly calkerlate that I've cleared off at least three hundred acres of the toughest kind of forest. Ah! sir you petted and pampered children of luxury little dream of what us old natives had to endure. How much tea do you suppose I had in my house during the first ten years of our pioneer life?"

"Twenty-five chests."

"Twenty-five, what!" he roared, as he hunted for more plug. "We had just two drawings and no more."

"Couldn't you get trusted at the corner grocery?"

"Get trusted! Corner grocery! Why, you infernal young lunatic, wasn't I located forty miles from the highest grocery! That's what I've been telling you all along. Old pioneers couldn't afford such luxuries as that. How much do you suppose our outfit cost for housekeeping?"

"Perhaps $5000, but that's according to the style of your carpets, piano and painting. Did you have lace curtains hung on poles?"

He jumped up and down like a man with a piece of beefsteak in his windpipe, and I thought he was a goner. However, after a higher jump than his crooked old legs seemed capable of, he blurted out:

"You infernal fool, but we didn't have nothing that we couldn't carry on our backs! Do you 'spose we was a-foolin' around with pianners out there in the vigin wilderness! Lace curtains hung on poles! Not much! If I'd had a spare shirt on a pole I'd have been perfectly satisfied. None of you spoiled children of luxury kin have any idea of how we had to git along in them old days."

"I presume not."

"One winter when the old woman was sick I had nothing to feed her but salt noon and corn dodgers."

"Oyster soup would have been very nice."

"Oyster thunder! Who knows anything about oysters fifty years ago. Don't you telling you that I was miles in the woods?"

"Yes, but why didn't you get out?"

"Get out, what for?"

"Why, you might have got out, and lived on your mother-in-law and had a trotting horse, a plug hat, a diamond pin and a high living. You were very foolish to stay in the woods, where they had no ward caucuses, or military parades, or circus processions, or ginger beer or banana puddings."

We generally end here. The old native chokes and gasps and jumps up and down and kicks his hat into the street and goes away saying:

"Them durned pampered idiots of luxury wouldn't keer two cents if the hull state was groved up to jackpines so that even a rabbit couldn't get through."

But next night he comes again to wrestle with me for the championship.—M. Quad.

Egyptian Mummies.

A distinguished Swedish chemist, Dr. Grusselbach, a professor in the University of Upsal, has come to the conclusion that those Egyptian mummies which are found in the ancient tombs on the Nile in a complete state—that is to say, without having been deprived of their brains and entrails like most mummies—are not embalmed at all, but are "really the bodies of individuals whose life has been momentarily suspended, with the intention of restoring them at some future time," only the secret of preservation was lost.

Professor Grusselbach adduces many proofs in support of his idea, among others his experiments during the last ten years, which he says have always proved successful. He took a snake and treated it in such a manner as to benumb it as though it had been carved in marble, and it was so brittle that he allowed it to fall it would have broken into fragments. In this state he kept it for several years, and restored it to life by sprinkling it with stimulating fluid the composition of which is a secret. For fifteen years the snake has been undergoing an existence composed of successive death and resurrections apparently without sustaining harm. The professor is reported to have sent a petition to his Government requesting that a criminal who has been condemned to death may be given to him to be treated in the same manner as the snake, promising to restore him to life in two years. It is understood that the man who undergoes this experiment is to be pardoned. Of course if a man can be kept in a state of suspended animation for two years, he may be kept for two thousand, and if the professor succeeds we may lay up a few specimens of our contemporaries for exhibition in the twentieth century.—Philadelphia Record.

Poor Girls.

The poorest girls in the world are those who have never been taught to work. There are thousands of them. Rich parents have petted them; they have been taught to despise labor and depend upon others for a living, and are perfectly helpless. The most forlorn and miserable women upon earth belong to this class. It belongs to parents to protect their daughters from this deplorable condition. They do them a great wrong if they neglect it. Every daughter should be taught to earn her own living. The rich as well as the poor require the training. The wheel of fortune rolls swiftly round—the rich are very likely to become poor, and the poor rich. Skill to labor is no disadvantage to the rich, and is indispensable to the poor. Well-to-do parents must educate their daughters to work, no reform is more imperative than this.

An interview with any number of the "lost sisters" will disclose the fact that a very large per cent of them did not know how or had no inclination for honest labor, and rather than earn a livelihood for themselves by honest and pure industry, they choose their present nefarious calling as the one thing they could do to gain money, ease and luxury. "As the twig is bent, so will the tree grow," is a maxim that may be appropriately applied to the training of our children, both sons and daughters. A little thought and patience on the part of parents when the child is young will work wonders in encouraging and bringing them to cheerful and skillful laborers in whatever calling they may afterwards choose. The first thing to teach a child is industrious habits without overtaxing his energies. Give them light tasks to do when young, see that they perform them, and encourage them in the work, at least by kind words if not deeds.

One of our exchanges aptly says: We think that the persons who came to this country from twenty to thirty years ago were pioneers and old settlers, and some people can hardly believe it possible that they were not among the first. Now and then, however, we meet an individual who has been in Oregon, Washington or British Columbia for forty years, and at longer intervals fifty years. The majority of the survivors of the days of half a century ago, if not all of them, are ex-employees of the Hudson Bay Company. The oldest of these, and the one longest in the country, we suppose, is John Todd, of Victoria, who, 75 years ago, when a boy of fifteen entered the employ of the Hudson Bay Company, and who in their service came across the continent in 1812. He was a Hudson Bay man for seventy years, the scrippural time allotted man for his entire existence. Mr. Todd, though still alive, is in feeble health, and may not survive the present year.

When an Austin schoolmaster entered his temple of learning a few mornings ago, he read on the blackboard the touching legend: "Our teacher is a donkey." The pupils expected there would be a combined cyclone and earthquake, but the philosophic pedagogue contented himself with adding the word "driver" to the legend, and opened the school with prayer, as usual.

It works neat, cheap, durable and effective.

Peruvian Bitters.

Cinchona Bitters. The Count Cincelton was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1620. The Countess, his wife, was prostrated by an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvian bark, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinquina." Grateful for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1622, she introduced the remedy in Spain, which was known under various names, until Linnaeus called it Cinchona, in honor of the lady who had brought them to the world. To the day after a large quantity of dried and fifty years, science has given us nothing to take its place. It effectively cures a morbid appetite for stimulants, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks excessive love of liquor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Cinchona is preserved in the Peruvian Bitters, which are as effective against malarial fever today as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroy. We guarantee the ingredients of these bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A trial will satisfy you that this is the best bitter in the world. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," and we willingly abide this test. For sale by druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order of: Loeb & Co., agents for Astoria.

—At Mrs. Lovett's Coffee Rooms, a cup of tea, coffee, or chocolate with pie or cake, ten cents. Ham and eggs. Open at any time. Entrance through Geo. Lovett's tailor shop.

A cough, cold or sore throat should be stopped. Neglect frequently results in an incurable lung disease or consumption. Brown's Bronchial Troches do not disorder the stomach like cough syrups and balsams, but act directly on the inflamed parts, allaying irritation, give relief in asthma, bronchitis, coughs, catarrh, and the throat troubles which singers and public speakers are subject to. For thirty years Brown's bronchial troches have been recommended by physicians, and always give perfect satisfaction. Having been tested by wide and constant use for nearly an entire generation, they have attained well-merited rank among the few staple remedies of the age. Sold at 25 cents a box everywhere.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RESTORER is a scientific combination of some of the most powerful restorative agents in the vegetable kingdom. It restores gray hair to its original color. It makes the hair white and clean. It cures dandruff and humors, and falling-out of the hair. It furnishes the nutritive principle by which the hair is nourished and supported. It makes the hair moist, soft and glossy, and is unsurpassed as a hair dressing. It is the most economical preparation ever offered to the public, as its effects remain a long time, making only an occasional application necessary. It is recommended and used by eminent medical men, and officially endorsed by the State Assayer of Massachusetts. The popularity of Hall's Hair Restorer has increased with the test of many years, both in this country and in foreign lands; and it is now known and used in all the civilized countries of the world.
