

The Daily Astorian. ASTORIA, OREGON: SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1885. WORTHY OF REPETITION.

The flight of absconding bank presidents, cashiers, and financial agents, from this country to Canada, has become so common as to excite little remark, beyond the familiar newspaper heading: "Another good man gone wrong." All a rascal has to do is to skip across the line and defy the detectives. But a late occurrence would seem to make their tenure insecure, and the Canada colony of American rascals are in terror. There is a fluttering in the dove coots, and the hawks may swoop upon the poor, defenseless birds at any time. A case in point is that of Lawrence Brainerd, who was for years a prominent man in Vermont. His father was once president of the Vermont Central railroad. He is a brother-in-law of ex-Governor Smith, president of the Vermont Central railroad, and was himself once president of the Lemoyne Valley railroad, the St. Alban's savings bank and other concerns. He was thought to be immensely rich, and was honored highly, and was active in church and Sunday-school work. He speculated with the funds of his bank and wrecked it, causing the ruin of many business men and farmers in Vermont. He skipped with the spoils to Winnipeg, Manitoba, lived quietly at the Winnipeg hotel, and at first went out but little. He was occasionally seen at horse races and other sporting events. He told certain people that he was an American speculator, interested in mica mining, and he frequently exhibited specimens. Two months ago two Boston detectives arrived, and one became acquainted with Brainerd. On the 5th inst., one of the detectives and Brainerd started south on a duck-shooting expedition several miles from the city in a lonely place. They were joined by the other detective and a friend. Brainerd was informed that they knew who he was, and asked to go quietly with them across the border, to avoid the expense of legal proceedings. Brainerd refused, and the detectives overpowered him, bound him hand and foot, threw him into a wagon and started for the boundary in hot haste. It is alleged that in order to prevent detection while passing through the country villages they dragged Brainerd with landauin.

As Brainerd did not return his wife became alarmed and communicated with the police and a law firm. The police, who knew that detectives were after Brainerd, started for the boundary with all speed to intercept the kidnapers. On the way to St. Vincent a railroad collision occurred and the police had a narrow escape. Last Sunday another special train was chartered and the police reached the boundary line, where the detectives, with Brainerd in custody, were found. The detectives refused to give their captive up, and while the police were searching for the authorities to arrest the detectives, the latter put Brainerd in a wagon and drove off at railroad speed. This was the last seen of them and they are now safe in Minnesota or Dakota. The Winnipeg police returned disgusted. There are more there who should be served the same way.

FATHER SPAULDING, who was a missionary among the Nez Perce Indians as early as 1839, when there were not 500 white men west of the Rocky mountains, tells the following story: He was located at that time near where the town of Lewiston, Idaho, now stands. One day, being down by the Clearwater river, he was surprised to hear a white man hail him from the other side of the stream. Upon inquiring what he wanted, the stranger answered that he was looking for a job of printing. The priest remembered that there were some printing materials among a lot of stores sent up to him by way of the Sandwich islands, so he set the stranger to work, and the result was a Nez Perces spelling book, which is still in use among those Indians. The printer's name was McCready, and he had drifted alone and on foot into those far western wilds in search of adventure. Father Spaulding still lives, and is hale and hearty.

The Astorian doesn't mind being slighted by the state capital authorities in the matter of the state fair as in other matters; it got used to that long ago and is perfectly able to stand it, but we cannot refrain from noting the contemptible attitude of the managers toward the Willamette Farmer. The Farmer is a journal that is just what its name purports; it is ably conducted and is certainly as deserving of recognition as any paper in the state. To the Farmer is due considerable of the possibilities toward having a state fair at all; for years it has talked agriculture and been replete with sensible ideas and suggestions, and now it is ignored by a circle of gentlemen who thus proclaim their own littleness.

The silver men are said to be very much alarmed on account of another fall in silver in London. The green-back men are also alarmed at the reported fall of paper and linen rags. It is amazing that in this alarming condition of things that the credit of a government to which we trust our lives, our persons, and our sacred honor, and even our money, should be going up. No one but a goldbug or a lunatic has any fear that the government which paid up several millions of its obligations, in interest and otherwise, and has of late had more money on hand than it knew what to do with, will be unable to pay the ten cents or so bullion difference between the gold dollar and the silver dollar, which it guarantees to pay.

The reigning sensation in San Francisco is a daring attempt to tunnel from a saloon basement across Mission street to the mint, in which millions were stored, which has just been discovered. A tunnel was commenced, but the street caved in. Two notorious crackmen, one named Reynolds, who were engaged in the scheme, escaped. It is thought that one of their confederates is buried in the cave.

Our government is not disposed to make an attempt to save Riel's neck. Secretary Bayard, on being consulted by a French Canadian gentleman on the subject, replied, in effect, that this government considers Riel's case none of its business—that since he did his fighting on British soil, he ought to take his chances with British law. This is sensible.

The old dispute between the British board of trade and the ship owners has broken out afresh. A report has been published which does not as yet present the evidence on both sides. It is contended that loss of life at sea is increasing, that unseaworthy ships are sent to sea, and that over-insurance is still common.

The New Northwest asks if a felon discharged from prison is to have the privilege of a vote, as the majority of them do under the existing order of penitentiary discipline, "isn't it rather hard on a woman, for the stealing of whose property the felon may have been sent to jail, to be denied the same privilege?"

It seems the object of Germany in annexing the Carolines was to obtain a port of call for ships bound to New Guinea. She also expects an increase of trade with the Pacific on completion of the Panama canal.

COUNT BEXOMAR, Spanish ambassador at Berlin, has been notified that a courier has crossed the frontier, bearing a note of apology from the Spanish government for the affront to the German embassy at Madrid.

ENGLISH capitalists will build a railway from Winnipeg to Hudson's bay if it can be done for $25,000 per mile. Engineers are now making surveys and estimates.

The first snow of the season in the United States fell at Wilkesbarre, Penn., August 28th, and on the same day it snowed at Quebec.

The Government will pay $20,000 of the expenses of Gen. Grant's funeral, of which $5,000 is for carriage hire.
