AFRAID TO TRUST THEM.

French Soldiers Not Permitted to Use The Lebel Rifle on Guard Mount.

The French value the secret of their new magazine rifle—the Lebel—so much that the troops have been ordered not to use it when mounting guard or taking part in maneuvers. For these purposes their old breech-loaders of the 1874 type are to be employed. This plan may or may not prove effectual in preventing the Germans from learning the mystery of the Lebel powder, which explodes noiselessly and without producing any smoke, but it must have a perilous tendency to bring about a repetition of the state of things which hindered the French from realizing the full superiority of the Chassepot during their last war with Germany. At the commencement of that war thousands of the French troops did not even know how to fire their new rifles, and had to ask for instructions on that subject. In the present case the danger is accentuated by the issue of a new regulation forbidding men to take into account either the smoke or the noise in a battle. This is, of course, on account of the new smokeless rifle. The position of a party on the defensive, hitherto betrayed by a cloud of smoke, will henceforth remain undisclosed to the assailants, and the practice of forcing the enemy to deploy by a fire from a great distance will have to be abandoned. The more the attacking party marches in serried ranks, and the quicker it advances upon the enemy, the more fearful will be the losses inflicted upon it by the invisible foe. These are very momentous changes, amounting in fact to a revolution in the modern art of war. But the plan of making the French soldiers carry their old rifles while they go through movements appropriate only to the new arm can only lead to confusion.—London Court Journal.

Delicate Mechanism Disordered and Ricked
The most delicate and intricate piece of mechanism in the human structure is the nerves. As the telegraphic wires transmit the electric force, so do these sensation centers. Mental and physical weakness, nervousness, sudden shocks paralyze it, but dyspepsia is its most obdurate foe. This foe is utterly defeated by the irritable tonic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and the cessation of disorder in the stomach is reflected in brain and nerves by restored tranquility and tranquility of nerves implies, in this instance, renewed vigor. A distinguished medical authority says: "The victim of nervous debility who finds chloral at night and bromides by day necessities, should know that a cure must be sought among agencies which strengthen the nerves," and assuredly Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has proved to be the best of these. Malarial complaints, constipation, biliousness, inactivity of the kidneys and rheumatism often involve nervous troubles by sympathy, and all are eradicated by the Bitters.

Rev. Dr. Henry M. Field has a reply to Ingersoll which the world characterizes as one of the best ever written. In answer to Ingersoll's demand for proof that there is a God, Mr. Field says: "Of course, it—the question of a God—is a mystery. But do you think to escape mystery by denying the Divine existence? You only exchange one mystery for another. The first of all mysteries is, not that God exists, but that we exist. Here we are. How did we come here? We go back to our ancestors; but that does not take away the difficulty, it only removes it farther off. Once begin to climb the stairway of past generations, and you will find that it is a Jacob's ladder, on which you mount higher and higher until you step into the very presence of the Almighty."

THAT FAMOUS RAFT.

How an Apparent Disaster Resulted in a Spread of Knowledge.

It will be remembered that a Mr. Leary started an immense raft of logs from Nova Scotia for New York last December, and that it went to pieces on the way. The good that has come out of the disaster is thus told by the Galveston News:

The raft was composed of thousands of logs, and of course when it broke up each log became what may be termed a special observing station for the hydrographic office. Since December each log that has been observed has had its position noted by passing vessels, and now, after the lapse of several months, the office at Washington has compiled three observations and issued a carefully prepared pilot chart.

This chart, which represents the courses which the logs took after the raft was broken up and the points in mid-ocean in which they were found, shows at a glance the general direction of the currents and gives an object lesson to the mariner that could scarcely have been given in any other way. Of course M. Leary's contribution to science was an involuntary one, but it has been no less valuable on that account, and has advanced the study of ocean currents in a way that no one deemed possible before the disaster occurred.

One of the peculiar features of the affair is that what happened was just what the scientists had long desired to do, but it was rather too expensive an experiment to be made voluntarily. Thousands of floating logs on the Atlantic meant too much danger to shipping to permit of the government's placing them there. However, no serious disaster has occurred from collision with any of these logs, and the wreck of the great raft has therefore been both instructive and harmless, except to the gentleman who owned it.

Spinal Disease.
DR. FLINT'S REMEDY should be taken whenever there is felt pain or soreness in the back, or weakness in the extremities, increased by motion, as these are the premonitory symptoms of spinal congestion. Descriptive treatise with each bottle; or, address Mack Drug Co., N. Y.

A Paris firm has produced porous glass for window panes to assist ventilation. Porous panes are said to be good for bodily pains, but whether porous glass is good for window panes remains to be determined.

TERRIBLE FOREWARNINGS.
Coughing in the morning, hurried or difficult breathing, raising phlegm, tightness in the chest, quickened pulse, chilliness in the evening or sweats at night, all or any of these things are the stages of consumption. Acker's English Cough Remedy will cure these fearful symptoms, and is sold under a positive guarantee by J. W. Conn, Druggist.

There are two ways (says Franklin) of being happy—we may either diminish our wants or augment our means. Either will do, the result is the same; and it is for each man to decide for himself, and do that which happens to be the easier.
