SCOPE OF THE RECENT FRANCO-RUSSIAN TREATY.

An Objectionable Article Which Had to Be Stricken Out Before Being Signed by the Czar.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Paris correspondent of the Times, M. de Blois, reviewing events in France and in the sphere of French influence during the past year, gives curious and interesting details as to the Franco-Russian treaty negotiations at St. Petersburg. He says: "The first article of the draft treaty declared that it had not for its object any modification of the European territorial status quo. M. Hanotaux refused to countersign such a treaty, explaining: 'Why is a repetition of the Franco-Russian treaty?' Count Muraviev replied: 'You will never induce the czar to sign a renunciation of territory. Neither M. Hanotaux nor Count Muraviev would yield. The problem seemed insoluble, when Count Muraviev had a conference with President Faure, who yielded, admitting that it was very undesirable to have such an article, but that, on the other hand, it would be impossible for him to return to France without a treaty. Accordingly the treaty was signed, Count Muraviev having declared that Emperor Nicholas would not hesitate to fight for France if she were unjustly attacked, but that, on the other hand, he would not intervene in a mere war of revenge.'

Returning to the club in the afternoon, I looked at his throat and found that the membrane had extended slightly, covering more area than in the morning. I told him that we would not wait for the result of the culture, but that I would immediately give him an injection of anti-toxin. Mr. Barnet had no bad feeling from the stomach. His pulse was good and strong, he was not confined to his bed, and he had no vomiting or diarrhoea. He stated that he was a fool for taking anything that came in the mail, but that he was in the habit of taking Kutnow's powders and the mailed box was handy. The membrane in the throat did not spread after the anti-toxin had been given. Mr. Barnet was extremely sick, and it was considered a mild case of clinical diphtheria. The culture was examined the following day, but streptococci were found in large numbers.

RINGWORM ON BABY'S FACE

Mother Ashamed to Take Him Out. Everything Failed to Cure. CUTICURA Cured in Three Days.

I have had my baby sick with his face full of ringworm, and tried everything and failed. I was ashamed to take him out, for his face would look all right. I was told to get CUTICURA. I got it on Wednesday, and by Saturday his face was all dried up. Now I can take him everywhere. If people only knew about how his face looked a week ago, and see it today, they would never be without it. Mrs. J. PETER, 84 1/2 First St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

HEART FAILURE CAUSED DEATH

Dr. Douglass' Statement in the Famous New York Case of H. C. Barnet.

POISON IN THE POWDERS

Barnet's Death Was Not Due to This Cause, but to Heart Trouble, the Doctor Says.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Detective Captain McClusky has given out a statement made by Dr. Henry Beaman Douglass, relative to his treatment of H. C. Barnet, a member of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, who died in November, 1908, ten days after having partaken of a powder which he had received from some unknown persons through the mail. Mr. Barnet was treated by Dr. Douglass, who declared that he was suffering from diphtheria. Interest in the case has revived on account of the death of Mrs. Kate Adams, from partaking of the contents of a bottle sent to Harry Cornish, at the Knickerbocker Club, by some unknown person. Dr. Douglass' statement is as follows:

"On October 30, 1908, I was summoned to see Mr. Barnet at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. Mr. Barnet said that he felt badly and had a sore throat. I examined his throat and found inflammation of the right tonsil, the adjoining parts and the uvula. This part was covered with a membrane. His pulse was about 80; his temperature about 99. He stated that the day previous he had been ill with his throat, and had taken a small quantity of powder from a box which had been sent him in the mails—which was evidently a sample box of Kutnow's powder. After taking this powder he had immediate relief from his stomach and had vomited pretty thoroughly. He called, in the emergency, Dr. Wendell Phillips, who prescribed some remedy for stomach trouble. Dr. Phillips said that he would not call again unless sent for, and the next day Barnet, feeling his throat still sore, sent for me. 'I told him that the excitation on his throat looked as if it must be diphtheria, but that the symptoms were so mild that we should not make a positive diagnosis without examining the germs of the throat. I procured two culture tubes and made a culture from the membrane from his tonsil and developed the culture.

"Returning to the club in the afternoon, I looked at his throat and found that the membrane had extended slightly, covering more area than in the morning. I told him that we would not wait for the result of the culture, but that I would immediately give him an injection of anti-toxin. Mr. Barnet had no bad feeling from the stomach. His pulse was good and strong, he was not confined to his bed, and he had no vomiting or diarrhoea. He stated that he was a fool for taking anything that came in the mail, but that he was in the habit of taking Kutnow's powders and the mailed box was handy. The membrane in the throat did not spread after the anti-toxin had been given. Mr. Barnet was extremely sick, and it was considered a mild case of clinical diphtheria. The culture was examined the following day, but streptococci were found in large numbers.

DEATH OF BYRON KIMBALL.

Byron Steuben Kimball, one of the oldest pioneers of Oregon, died at his home on Young's river at 1:30 Tuesday morning. Mr. Kimball had been suffering from heart and lung trouble for the past three years, and his death was not wholly unexpected. In 1866 he contracted the grippe, which resulted in more serious complications, causing his death.

Deceased was in his 93rd year. He was born on May 30, 1829, at Laporte, Laporte county, Ind., and in 1847 crossed the plains with his parents. He settled in Oregon, and went through the Indian troubles of early days, being a survivor of the Whitman massacre, in which his father was killed.

In the spring of 1848 the family moved to Clatsop plains and settled on what is now known as the West farm. Mr. Kimball engaged in the oyster business at Shoalwater bay for several years, after which he was associated with J. Megler in the cannery business at Chinook and Brookfield. Coming to Astoria, he was connected with the transfer company of McTavish & Carruthers, after retiring from which he took up his residence on Young's river.
