Britons Have New Telephone.

A new telephonic device already in actual use in England is the laryngophone, a transmitter in which a disk is placed against the throat of the speaker and the sound is transmitted by the vibration of the vocal chords, says a London dispatch to the New York Tribune. It is suitable for use in noisy factories and workrooms where the ordinary telephone mouth-piece transmitter would pick up the other sounds in the room and so prevent conversation.

In appearance the laryngophone resembles the ordinary telephone except that there is a smooth rounded rubber disk instead of a mouthpiece. The receiver is the same and the messages are received in the ordinary speaking voice.

Land for Canadian Soldiers.

The forest reserves held by the Canadian federal government and all situated in the West, comprise an area of approximately 27,500,000 acres, and consist of tracts of land unsuitable for agriculture which have been set apart permanently for forest production. At the request of the soldier settlement board areas totalling about 480,000 acres were withdrawn from the reserves in order to be made available for soldier settlement. For the most part these areas consist of small tracts of a few hundred acres, withdrawn from a number of different reserves. Only in the cases of the Riding mountain and Porcupine reserves were the areas larger, about 220,000 acres being withdrawn from the former and about 240,000 acres from the latter.

Dress and Insurance Rates.

Swiss women who wear short skirts and low-necked gowns will have to pay higher rates of life insurance than those who do not. The Swiss insurance companies have announced that in fixing the premiums on policies of women's lives they will take into consideration the women's wearing apparel. The shorter the skirt or lower the décollete, the higher the insurance rate will be.

The Swiss companies justify this action on the ground of a great increase of illness and disease among their women clients which they claim is due to the wearing of short skirts and low-necked dresses.

TO BE SUIT YEAR

In Dressy Tailleurs Clinging Fabrics are in Vogue.

Outfits Are Equipped With Coats Which Have Mandarin Tendency in Many Instances.

It is to be a suit year. For several seasons, observes a fashion authority, the one-piece dress has crowded the tailored suit out of its rightful place and the dressy suit almost out of the picture.

This year the suit has come back. In dressy and semi-dressy tailleurs the clinging fabrics are the vogue, with coats which have a mandarin tendency in many instances. Quite a new note has crept in with the binding of the edges with ribbons of a matching color or of black. Crepe de chine linings are used in very high colors.

Three-piece suits are also a popular tendency. Loose coats or capes form the wraps with matching skirts and high-colored bodices of crepe de chine and the coat lined to match the bodice. Black and navy blue will be the favorites for such a use.

In the very severely tailored trousers English tweeds are being shown in grays and tans, depending almost entirely for their beauty upon the quality of the material.

In street dresses, which, by the way, are to retain their familiar straight lines and slim silhouettes, black, navy blue, gray and beige are being shown by the best shops, the heaviness of the material being lightened for spring wear by the application of touches of organdie and taliste. A few are elaborated in a novel fashion by the use of French knots embroidered upon the material in a very fine black or navy braid. Bright-colored embroidery and beads are passe.

MUST HAVE TOUCH OF RIBBON

Paris Edict is That Every Frock Must Make Use of the Dangling Strands.

This is a ribbon year, says Paris, and every smart frock, in foundation or finish, should have its touch of ribbon. Ribbons are found in a great variety of designs suited for every possible use, but the smartest of them will invariably be the crepe or varnished variety.

Certain smart spring frocks boast of panels of ribbon. There are broad ribbon panels at the sides and narrow floating panels are caught under the hem at the bottom of the skirt. A smart variation of a georgette model has a vest-like bodice made of wide broad ribbon. Shirtings of a very narrow width head the skirt and outline a flounce.

Girdles, of course, will make the most of ribbons. A unique sash girde, straight from Paris, is made of wide crepe de chine ribbon printed in an oriental design. The ribbon encircles the waist twice and ties at the left side with a short loop above the waistline and a long one below. The end, longer than either of the loops, is thrown over the top.

A rather narrow girde of purple and gold ribbon has a wreath of flowers made of ribbon in pastel shades combined with wheat heads.

Black satin ribbon makes a very modish and becoming ruff. The loops of ribbon are wider toward the back where it is finished by streamer ends. Naturally one would expect to find bags of ribbon designed to be carried with ribbon costumes. There are many of them and all are beautiful. One attractive bag of brown taffeta ribbon is made with four panels. At the top of the bag are overlapping panels edged with plaited satin ribbon.

Rose Corals Favorites.

Rose corals, set in round medallions of gold, will this year be used as pendants on black silk neck ribbons with bracelets of black enamel set with smaller matching medallions.
