ANIMALS' WANDERINGS.

Country Mouse and Town Mouse Fa-ble Has Poundation in Pact.

The fable of the country mouse and the town mouse has a foundation in fact, Mice occasionally migrate in large numbers when food grows scarce and travel considerable distances to fresh houses. Farmers in a part of Pertle shire had a good reason to become aware of this fact when a couple of years ago vast swarms of mice invaded their cornfields at harvest time.

But the mouse only travels when it has to. The rat, on the contrary, seems to take a yearly outing, in very much the same fashion as do human beings Rats are the most migratory creatures in the world. Troops of rats leave the towns at the end of summer and spend a month or two in the country, apparently in order to enjoy the change of food which the country affords at that time of the year in the way of fresh fruit and grain. Before the cold weather sets in they are all back again in their old quarters.

Reindeer migrate with the same reg ularity as swallows. They move south when winter sets in, but as soon as ever the snow begins to melt they travel steadly north, sometimes for as much

To end a heliday by deliberate sul cide is so strange a phenomenon that for a long time naturalists looked upon the stories of the migration of the mings as an improbable fiction. Yet the facts are beyond dispute. At irregular intervals these ratlike creatures start out from their homes in the fastnesses of northern Scandinavia in huge droves numbering term of thousands and travel steadily southward. Death pursue em in a hundred forms. Hawks and other birds of prey hover above them Thousands are drowned in rivers. Yet the rest struggle on until they reach the sea. They do not stop. They plungs in, swim out and struggle on until at last their strength falls and they drown. Not one ever returns from this journey of death.—London Answers.

COTTON IN A FABRIC.

How to Tell if Worsted or Woolen

Cloths Are Adulterated. Worsted cloths are less often adulter ated than woolens and are more easily detected. A cotton worsted is a lie of the face of it, for the cotton stands out with prominence. But often a cotton thread is twisted with a worsted thread, and to determine its presence it is only necessary to take the twist out of the thread and then examine its component parts.

Cotton, having a long staple, can be carded and combed with wool to be spun into worsted yarn. This is done to cheapen the cost of production. Cotton is carded and spun with wool and shoddy, not so much to chespen the yarn, for cotion is generally as expen-sive as some shoddles, but is introduced to give strength or spinning qualities to the stock. In many cases the shoddy is of such short staple that it would not stand the drawing in spinning, and, as it would make the cost of the yarn too high to put in enough wool to give that lacking strength, cotion is put in for this pur-

The percentage of cotton in a fabric can be determined in this manner: Take a small piece of cloth and weigh it. Now boll it for five minutes in a 5 per cent solution of caustic soda. Take out what is left, and, if any, it is all cotton. The wool will all be dissolved. The percentage of shoddy cannot be determined except by experience

A cloth or yarn with shouldy in it is easily detected by its feel. Cloth made of all new wool is softer feeling than one containing shoddy, for the latter has lost that new, soft, springy feel peculiar to wool.—American Wool and Cotton Reporter.

Success Prolongs Life. It is now well known that increased complexity of life with increased ex-penditure distinctly aids longevity. Luxury, "the fertile parent of a whole family of diseases," modifies it greatly, of course, but this is a manageable factor, says the London Chronicle. We have only to recall personal experience to realize the force of intellectual stimulation. The interest of sport will sustain men without fatigue for distances they otherwise could not traverse. The excitement of strife will often mask the presence of wounds. Self forgetfulness in all the walks of life, under the stress of love, chivalry or accepted duty, doubles human endurance. Success gives new vitality, new powers, and this is another name for new life.

A COONSKIN FARE.

h Would Have Pald the Traveler in Let the Change Go.

Many years ago, as the story runs, when coonshins were worth six bits tpices in Arkansas and a regular fee of two bits was assessed for ferrying a horseman across the St. Francis river, there came along a traveler whose encapital consisted of but a single pelt, and the ferryman hadn't a cent of change in his pocket.

The traveler was bound to cross, but refused to pay three times as much as the man who passed before him or the ans who was to come next. The ferryman would not wet an oar unless payment for his services was assured Here was ample foundation for an argument, and presumably the opportunity was not neglected. But a satisfactory arrangement was finally reached, the traveler getting value received for his coanshin by being wafted thrice across the stream. This of course would leave him on the right side, and judgment, acknowledged that he had received its value in the double ferriage and forthwith started on his fifty mile ride up the river to the nearest

Party Germs.

Partisauship began early, We think of Jackson as the beginner of our violent party system, but, ai-though he did give it sudden stovelopment, the germs of it began as on as Washington dropped the heim. It lay, hardly understood, in the very nature of the newly created government, which was a series of checks and balances built on fundamentally opposed conceptions. The yest wealth of Pessee is dieided into a large number of small savings, according to recant computation in the Franch financial journal, Le Rentier. In France, it seems, there are not 30,000 perons who are millionairs-and it aires is invant a possessor of 1,000, 000 france, or in other words, $103; 000 There are possibly ten persons in the country whose fortunes are 100,000,000 france, or about $19,000,000 or over,

All the holders of great fortunes ony easily be mentioned by name only about 100 persons are worth between $2,000,000 and $10,000, 000, and 14 000 bave accommutated or inherited property valued at from $193,000 to $380,000. That is, France has very few righ citizens. This distribution of wealth in France is indicated by the facts that in 1902 there was left by persons dying property of the value of $021,000,000; but of the 363,612 inheritances distributed in that year, more than 200,000 consisted some regging from 20 cents to $1,030. About two-thirds of the property to be distributed was in mores of $200 to $400. The large obermances, from about $50,000 to $100,000, represented only 0.04 per cent of the total amount; and the property to be divided amounting to more than $100,000 represented less than 0.01 per cent of

It is the vast army of small savers in France, the 9,000,000 persons whose names figure in the tax accounts and who own the millions of small parcels of personal property and real estate, that make the fortune of the country. In compar sion with their aggregate accomula tions the possessions of the wealthy are inviguitional. Such facts a these illustrate in a striking manner the thrift of the masses of the French people.
