

Volunteers play key role in city staircase project

By Jolene Guzman

FALLS CITY — The rehabilitation project on Falls City's beloved staircase between Third and Prospect streets is steaming along, with the help of a large group of volunteers. Falls City Mayor Terry Ungricht said more than 20 volunteers have helped pour concrete on nine stairs that were beyond repair and install new handrails, a process which is nearing completion.

When the weather allows, the stairs will be sealed to fill cracks, smooth the surface and protect the staircase. Painting the stairs — with a waterfall theme in honor of the city's namesake falls — and the installation of three benches on landings along the staircase will complete the project.

Falls City received a $9,600 HEAL Cities grant to pay for part of the work. HEAL (Healthy Eating Active Living) Cities is a program that helps cities through education and policy consulting to create an environment where exercise and eating healthy is more convenient.

Work began on the staircase in mid-October.

Ungricht said the project has evolved into a community mission, with Falls City residents of all ages lending a hand.

in the skill levels of our volunteers," Ungricht said, noting professional welders and a carpenter have offered their expertise to help complete the project.

"It has turned into a real communitywide project," he said. "Every day the volunteers are out working and people are stopping by and telling of their memories of events that have happened on the stairway. The stories cover all ages of Fall City residents and go back decades."

Road jurisdiction examined

By Jolene Guzman

POLK COUNTY — When cities annex land that was formerly under Polk County's jurisdiction, sometimes the map gets muddy when it comes to who owns the roads running through those properties.

Polk County Public Works, working with the cities, will soon begin to untangle the jurisdictional issues when it comes to roads.

Public Works Director Todd Whitaker said the county still is trying to locate all the roads or road segments in question, which he anticipates will only be a few. Once found, the county will approach cities to possibly discuss transferring jurisdiction — which would require board of commissioners and city council action — or at least the maintenance portion.

Whitaker said the concern for the county is that annexations often are part of development projects, which eventually lead to heavier traffic on those roads. "The county road department isn't set (up) for urban traffic," he said, noting the county doesn't have a street sweeper to clean roads or experience dealing with storm drains common to urban areas.

Whitaker added researching who owns the road segments can help clean up poor record keeping for both the county and cities.

"Sometimes these don't get recorded ... and it ends up not getting maintained at all," he said.

City leaders receive recognition

Itemizer-Observer staff report
POLK COUNTY — Mid-Valley Council of Governments recognized two local city leaders with awards at its recent 2015 Annual Awards Dinner.

Dallas City Councilor Ken Woods Jr. was presented the Gwen VanDenBosch Regional Leadership Award. The award recognizes an elected official in Polk, Marion or Yamhill county who demonstrates outstanding leadership in regional and intergovernmental affairs.

Woods has served on the Dallas City Council for 33 years, Mid-Willamette Area

Commission on Transportation (MWACT) for 19 years, and on the League of Oregon Cities' Transportation Committee, which considers statewide legislative transportation issues. Woods has also served as a trustee on the board of directors of City-County Insurance Services (CIS), a local government insurance pool. Independence Economic Development Director Shawn Irvine also was honored at the dinner with the Wes Kvarsten Professional Service Award.

Irvine was chosen for the award for his work in economic development both in Independence and in Polk County. He is a member of the Polk County Tourism Board; expanded the enterprise zone serving Dallas, Monmouth and Independence; and supervised and helped direct the city of Independence's cultural liaison intern.
