INFECTED SHEEP AT MITCHELL TREATED

Government Expert Has Hard Trip From Bend—Condition of Roads Makes Buckboard Necessary.

Thirty-six hundred sheep, the only scab-infected animals he could locate in the Mitchell country, were dipped under the supervision of Dr. R. A. Parsons, U. S. bureau of animal industry expert, he reported on his return from a 10-day absence from Bend.

Twenty-eight miles of the trip from Prineville to Mitchell could be made by auto, Dr. Parsons reports, but the journey over the summit made the use of a buckboard necessary. Often the mud was hub-deep. As the higher points were reached, the mud disappeared and hard-packed snow made travel comparatively easy.

Destruction of Liquor by Sheriff Makes Large Total for Two Months; Feline Inebriate Sips Moonshine

Completing a total of 146 gallons of distilled liquor destroyed since the first of the year, Sheriff S. E. Roberts, in the presence of witnesses, poured 19 gallons of moonshine into the alley from the doorway of the county jail Friday afternoon. In addition to the finished product destroyed, the sheriff's records show 1512 gallons of confiscated mash which has also been thrown out.

Friday's destruction of liquor was seen by few, but as the increasing stream of high proof corn juice flowed down the alley, passers by sniffed the once familiar odor, and one or two followed it to its source.

Most interested of all, however, was a lean, rangy cat. Tom got one whiff of the moonshine, then headed straight for the nearest liquor-filled rut. One sip, and Tom showed all the evidences of feline agony. Pain gave way to exhilaration, and the bibulous one darted away at top speed. He was still in high two blocks away.

Liquor destroyed in 1919 and 1920 by Sheriff Roberts and Special Agent Nixon, then chief of police in Bend, totalled 429 quarts. None of this amount was moonshine whiskey.

HOTBEDS LENGTHEN GROWING SEASON FOR GARDEN CROPS; MAY BE UTILIZED FOR LATE VEGETABLES IN THE FALL

BEFORE BIRDS AND BUDS APPEAR

When the bluebirds and robins make their appearance, it is time to make plans for starting garden work, but several things can be done before the birds and buds appear that will prevent delay when it is desired to start actual operations, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture. Plan the garden on paper. Get the seed, and make sure it is of the best quality. Good seed will not sleep long in good garden soil, but poor ones may never wake up.

Hotbeds and cold frames enable the home gardener to lengthen the growing season for his crops. With them he can start his operations a few weeks in advance of the last chilly days of spring, before which it is not possible to plant out of doors. Throughout the spring and summer these beds may be utilized, and after the first fall frost they furnish protection for late vegetables. They are inexpensive and easily operated, say garden specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

Standard hotbed sash are 2x6 feet, and it is customary to make a home garden hotbed with one, two, or more sash, according to the size of bed desired. Select a well protected and thoroughly drained spot, dig a pit 12 to 18 inches deep and a little larger than the bed is to be made. Throw the good top soil to one side and the bottom soil to the other side. For a two-sash bed about one good wagonload of fresh horse-stable manure middle and the inner portion to the outside, in order to get uniform heating throughout. Then put the manure into the pit, each forkful being shaken to break it apart, and spread it evenly. It should be well tramped. Put in a layer about three inches deep, then another layer, treading each until the pit has been filled level with the ground. In case the manure is rather dry, a little water should be sprinkled over it as it is spread in the bed. It should be just moist enough to pack reasonably solid, but springy under the feet.

The frame of the bed, made of wood, is then set on top of the manure and the earth from the bottom of the pit banked up outside of the frame to keep out the cold. The north side of the frame should be six feet high. The manure should be thrown in a flat pile few feet away from where the bed is to be constructed and the pile turned about twice at intervals of three or four days. As it is turned the outer portion of the pile is thrown to the inches higher than the south side. The good soil from the surface of the pit is spread on the packed manure. It is a good plan to mix a little well rotted manure with this soil. A very light sprinkling of fertilizer, so little that it can scarcely be seen, will be beneficial.

Put the sash on and leave the bed to heat for several days. First the manure will become very hot, then after two or three days it will gradually cool. The temperature will then remain more moderate. No seeds should be planted until the temperature of the soil has fallen below 85 degrees. Use a thermometer, the bulb of which is buried about three inches deep in the soil. Feeling the bed with the hand is not a reliable method of taking the temperature. Have a piece of old carpet or a burlap mat to throw over the sash for protection on extremely cold nights. Loose straw will serve the same purpose, but it is difficult to handle and must be weighted down to keep it from blowing away. In warm weather the straw is swept off the glass so the sunshine can get to the plants.

Care of Hotbeds. Hotbeds must be watched during bright days to prevent them from becoming too warm, as the sun, shining directly on the glass, soon brings the temperature above that suitable for the growing of plants. Ventilation is provided by propping the sash up at one side or the other, according to the direction of the wind. Have the wind blow over the opening and not directly into the bed. The bed should be closed toward evening so it will keep warm during the night. As the season advances more ventilation is necessary.

Cold frames are hotbeds minus artificial heat—simply sash-covered frames with no pit under them, but banked up on the outside to keep out the cold. They are useful for growing plants that have been started in hotbeds, and for hardening plants to get them in condition to plant in the garden. Sometimes a bed about 12 1/2 feet in length, covered by 4 regular hotbed sash, is divided into two parts, one part being made into a hotbed and the other into a cold frame. This is an excellent arrangement and one that is not expensive.

DISPUTE OWNERSHIP OF CACHE OF BOOZE

Man Arrested At Dance For Giving Drink To Friend, Says Moonshine Belonged To Another. There was a slight disagreement Saturday night as to whether John Bollman or Jack Emerson was the owner of four bottles of moonshine cached near the McKinley-Hampson mill, and the result was that both men were charged with having intoxicants in their possession.

Bollman and Emerson appeared before County Judge Sawyer Monday afternoon, pleaded guilty, and paid fines of $50 each.

Deputy Sheriff George Stokes was in hiding for two hours near the dance which was going on at the mill, and finally saw Bollman come to the cache, take a bottle and give a drink to a companion. Stokes flashed his electric light on the pair, but Bollman denied that the liquor was his. He said it belonged to Emerson. This was admitted by Emerson, with the addition that he had told Bollman the location of the cache, Stokes reported.
