

CRESCENT LAKE DAM SITE NOW NEARLY READY

Raising Lake Level Key to Tumalo Reclamation

FINISH THIS WINTER

60,000 Acres-Foot Maximum Storage Estimated—Development Halted Years Ago By Reservoir Leak Made Possible.

With completion of a coffer dam, temporarily shutting off the flow at the outlet of Crescent lake, work is progressing steadily leading to the construction of a permanent rock crib log dam, which is intended to raise the level of the lake 10 feet, providing storage facilities for the Deschutes County Municipal Improvement district, formerly the Tumalo project. The work is being handled by the United Contracting company, with John F. Peede as resident engineer. Completion of the dam is expected by the end of November, to make possible added irrigation water for the project next summer. Twenty-four men are now being employed, but this number is shortly to be increased.

Figures furnished by C. M. Redfield, project engineer, give 60,000 acre feet as the amount which can be stored in the lake, with a 20 year average of 35,000 acre feet. This will make possible a maximum discharge of 400 second feet, of which the district will be entitled to 250 second feet.

Storage Water Provided
The heavy early flow of Tumalo creek will take care of irrigation needs during the first half of the season, and as the runoff from the mountains begins to fall, water from the lake, diverted from the Deschutes at Bend, will replenish the diminishing supply.

The Tumalo project, as originally planned depended on storage of Tumalo creek water, but failure of the reservoir to hold water, meant that only the minimum flow of the creek could be depended on, with the result that of the 16,000 acres of irrigable land in the project, only 6,000 acres could be watered through the season. The use of Crescent lake storage water will permit the reclamation of the entire acreage.

At the lake outlet, the dam site is cleared on both sides, and digging of a conduit trench 20 feet in depth is now under way. The bed of the stream is still to be cleared of boulders.

Canal Work Rushed
The dam will be 250 feet long, with a spillway 100 feet in length, and will rise 30 feet above the bottom of the conduit, allowing for a 23 foot head. Water will be discharged from two cast iron gates, each five by six feet, which will be controlled from the top of the dam. An inclined trash rack along the face of the dam will protect the gates against clogging.

A log cabin just completed about 50 feet from the dam site, is now being used as headquarters for contractors and engineers, and later will be used by the watchman who will be stationed at the dam once the system is in operation.

Coffer dam construction is preparation for a diversion dam, was recently completed in the Deschutes river in Bend, and blasting on the canal and preliminary work on the permanent dam which will combine to divert storage flow from the Deschutes to the Tumalo feed canal four miles distant, is being rushed.

IMBIBED TO EASE TONSIL CAVITIES

Man With Quart Pleads Operation—Must Work Out $100 Fine on Streets of Bend.

Jack Casey used moonshine to ease the pain following an operation for removal of his tonsils, but Police Chief Willard Houston, to whom the explanation was made, failed to see why an entire quart was necessary, and took Casey and the liquor into custody when he found them together on Wall street Saturday night. Now Casey will work on the city streets, for his plea of guilty to the charge of possessing liquor in police court Tuesday drew a fine of $100 from Recorder Ross Farnham, and the defendant had spent his last money for booze.

Casey will be one of a crew of two, Homer Farr, who pleaded guilty to a like charge, and was rewarded with a like fine, will be the other street worker.

DRAW DECISION ENDS TAME GO

Speck Woods and Billy Gardeau Meet in Bloodless Encounter

Two rounds of wild, futile swinging which brought the fans to their feet but had little effect on either fighter, following eight tame rounds, resulted in a draw between Speck Woods and Billy Gardeau at the American Legion building Monday night. No blood was seen during the entire encounter. Gardeau had the advantage in reach by several inches, and while Woods revealed to the fans here that since leaving Bend he has developed a style of defense similar to that affected by James T. Jeffries in his youth, he failed to land any damaging blows.

Gardeau hit the canvas in the ninth round, but he was partly off his balance when Woods struck him. The lanky stranger aimed his swings too high during the early rounds, sometimes missing Woods' head by more than a foot. The former local boy neglected even to block during the second round. It was evident that he could tell several seconds beforehand when Gardeau would start one of his swings.

After being floored in the ninth, Gardeau came back with a rally which had Woods groggy, but was unable to finish him before the gong. The same tactics were used by both in the final round, which was even.

COUNTY AGENT JAMISON GOES OUT OF OFFICE

Warren T. McDonald His Successor

IS WELL PREPARED

Successful Grade Sulphur Tests Among Accomplishments Of Man Leaving For Private Position After 2 1/2 Years

D. L. Jamison, for the past two and a half years county agricultural agent, has resigned and is succeeded by Warren T. McDonald, for some years past a resident of Yamhill county. Jamison will remain in the county, having accepted a position with the Concrete Pipe company and will have charge of its Bend plant.

McDonald is a native of Iowa and a graduate of the Iowa State college, one of the best agricultural colleges in the country. He is 30 years of age, is married and will establish his home in Redmond. McDonald has served as secretary of the farm bureau in Yamhill county and has been otherwise active in agricultural affairs. He is an overseas veteran and is past commander of American Legion Post 59 of Yamhill. Mrs. McDonald is also a graduate of Iowa State college and has taught sciences in the high school at Yamhill.

Accomplishments Many
Jamison has accomplished some of the most effective work ever done by the extension service in Deschutes county. His development of crude sulphur as an alfalfa fertilizer, thus bringing about a much lower price for the farmer, is fresh in mind. His work on potato diseases and the advancement of the potato industry in Central Oregon in general has been particularly effective, it is said. Another outstanding accomplishment of his work was the testing of all the dairy cows in the county for tuberculosis. This was one of the most thorough campaigns ever put on in the state. Officials of the extension service of the college state that they regret to lose Jamison from the college staff, but also state that the work has now become so well organized in the county that it can be picked up immediately by the new appointee.

Continues Sulphur Tests
An immediate activity of the newly appointed county agent will be the pressing of the sulphur application project. Much of the sulphur applied in Deschutes county was put out three years ago and its effectiveness is becoming diminished. In the next year or two, large acreages must be resulphured and in this work McDonald will have a leading part. Another task immediately ahead is assistance to the Deschutes County Shorthorn Breeders' association in the fitting of a representative exhibit for the Pacific International Livestock exposition. McDonald is particularly qualified for this work, having been raised on a stock farm in Iowa where Shorthorn cattle and Poland China hogs were specialties.

Professor G. R. Hyslop of the college is expected in Deschutes county shortly to make the second field inspection of the large acreage of potatoes entered for certification. This work will be under the direction of the county agent as in the past.

ions of big steps. Laverna Dugas drew a big hand for her acrobatic dancing. She also drew $14 presented by the spectators. The pavilion was built at the suggestion of Bill Cone by a crew sent out by Gerry Horstkotte.

Fat Men Beat "Leans"
While the dancing was in progress, a baseball game was being played between the "fats" and "leans," in which it was proved to the tune of 16 to 4 that excess flesh is an aid rather than a hindrance to athletic prowess. How Frank R. Prince managed to qualify as a fat man was a mystery to many, but he explained it by pointing out that the team badly needed him as a utility player. He served chiefly in the box, with T. E. J. Duffy on third; Jack Hill, left field; Clayton Maxim, catcher; Howard White, first base; Morris R. Davis, second; George Stapleton, Shortstop; Bruce Shull, center field, and Asa Bedient, right field. For the leans were Max Neilson, pitcher; C. V. Erickson, right field; H. S. Francis, left field; Gerry Horstkotte, catcher; John Hagen, center field; Clifford Johnson, first base; Mike Zimmerman, second; Walter Bradbury, third, and Dick Youngberg, shortstop. The four inning contest was umpired by D. Allen.

General arrangements for the picnic were under the direction of L. O. Taylor, with Frank R. Prince handling publicity, and George Green in charge of transportation. As his crews, Green had Engineer Bert Moore, Fireman Lawrence Roney, Conductor M. E. Murphy and Brake-man Frank Winslow on "Four Spot," with Engineer Sam Johnson, Fireman Clinton Van Tassel, Conductor Henry Van Tassel and Brake-man Bill Bonnavitch for "Two Spot." The problem of providing the large quantity of supplied needed was handled by S. R.

Brown, dispensing of the lemonade was in charge of Robert Littlefield, assisted by Billy Beer and Earl Waymouth, while 100 gallons of ice cream was dished out under the supervision of Walter Bradbury. His assistants were John Hagen, W. Allen, D. Hardgraft, George Rasmussen, Cliff Rasmussen and D. Youngberg.

Policing of the grounds with so large a crowd to be handled is no mean task, and Jack Mahoney as chief of police was another man who was kept constantly on the jump. So were his 14 cops, John Mellitor, Louis Poole, Homer Mayrand, George Stapleton, Pete Bagg, Andrew Jaquet, A. J. Hebert, H. E. Hebert, Bob Smith, Howard Allen, George Rand, O. W. Rand, Eric Oland and William Shull.

J. D. Donovan headed the first aid department, with Bob Smith as his right bower. C. M. Olson headed the grounds committee, composed of men from the camps, and James Blaisdell saw to it that the rules of safety first were followed. The sports committee was presided over by Frank Anderson; judges were Henry Whitsett, George Brick and Max Neilson; James Fisher was the record keeper, and Art Clapp the starter.

Roy Van Vleet was official photographer, Bill Cone was listed as announcer, and Herbert Fraley had a soft job as gloom chaser. There wasn't any gloom, so Fraley presided over the destinies of the fat men's ball team.

The Telephone's Monologue.

I am a telephone. While I am not broke, I am in the hands of a receiver. I have a mouthpiece, but unlike a woman I never use it. I follow you to make dates with girls and girls use me to break said dates. I have a dial up their wives over me and wives call their husbands down over me. I never get to call anyone, but sometimes the company comes and takes me out. I am not a bee, but I often buzz. I am the "bell" of the town, and while I do not get jewelry, I often get rings.—The Northwestern Bell.

First Use of Khaki in Army.

When volunteer troops were called for the Spanish-American war it was found that the heavy dark-blue uniform was too warm for service in the tropics. A service uniform of khaki cloth was therefore introduced. In 1902 the whole dress regulation of the army was changed.
