A Merry Evening.

The near sighted man watches his friend restore to a portly dowager a ridiculous little bead bag that she had dropped as he sailed past their corner of the room. "I wish," he said plaintively, "that women would learn not to drop things. My wife got me into a ridiculous scrape the other night by not being able to hold on to her belonglugs.'

"How was that?" his friend inquired.

HUMAN PERSONALITY.

antitit wellman

may international

Product Not of Brain or Heart, but of the Nervous System.

To Galen is ascribed the belief that the brain was the sent of the rational soul, the heart the location of courage and fear, and the liver that of love. This distribution of the element of personality over the physical body finds its expression in the common speech of today, particularly in relation to the heart, which is widely accepted by the popular mind as the source of the more tender emotions.

It was chiefly through the anntomists and physiologists of the early renals sance that the modern movement. which has tended to limit personality to the nervous system, was seriously begun, a movement which, with the increase of knowledge, has gained support to such an extent that it can now be maintained beyond any reasonable doubt.

Human personality is in no true sense the outcome of the non-nervous organs, such as the digestive or the circulatory organs, but is the direct product of the nervous system. This system, to be sure, is embedded among the other organs of the body, and the environment thus provided influences profoundly its condition and action, but acutences or duliness of sense, quickness or slowness of action, temperamental traits, such as a gloomy or bright disposition, in capacity, shiftlessness, honesty, thriftiness or sweetness, are all, strictly speaking, functions of the nervous or gans

Although only the higher animals can be said to possess personality in this sense, traces of it occur in the lower forms, and its evolution is indissolubly connected with that of the nervous system.-Professor G. H. Par ker in Popular Science Monthly.

PULAR RESEARCH.

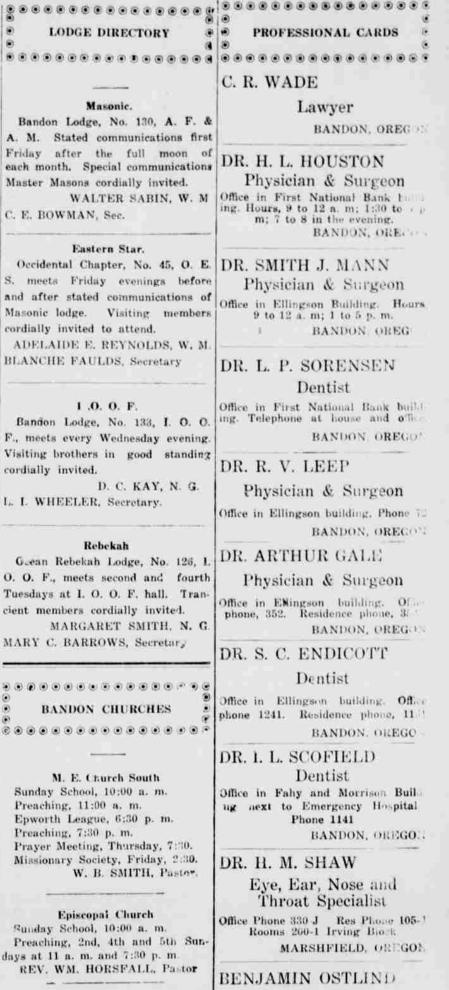

Arctio and Antarctic Problems That Still Remain Unsolved.

The era of pole hunting is now hep plly over, and the best result of Pea ry's and Amundsen's athletic feats in the north and south is that the really important problems of the circumpolar regions can henceforth be attacked with a single mind. From a scientific standpoint enough work remains to be done in these regions to last for several generations.

The antarctic has only been scratch ed, so to speak. Owing to the diverse scales used in school geographics the average man goes through life with hadly warped ideas concerning the relative sizes of various parts of the earth's surface, and so probably few people realize that the antarctic continent is very much larger than Europe -in fact, about as large as Europe and Australia combined. Of this huge continent we do not know even the shape and location of the coast line, except for one long stretch south of Australia and a few widely scattered points elsewhere while the whole interior, apart from a narrow wedge between Ross sea and the pole, is virtually blank on our maps. In the arctic a patch of a million square miles is still absolutely untouched. So much for mere surface geography; but, of course, modern pofar research includes a wide range of nongeographical problems pertaining to such diverse subjects as geology. glaciology, meteorology, terrestrial mag netism, seismology, oceanography, zool egy, botany, physiology, ethnology and archaeology .- Review of Reviews.

It's Unsafe to Laugh at Others.

Dr. A. R. Taylor, a foremost western educator and for many years president of the Kausas State Normal school in Emporia, tells this story: "As I was walking downtown one day, just a tew steps ahead of me was a tine old gentleman in silk hat and broadcloth, who had a most absurd poster planed on his back, contrasting oddly with his dignified bearing. Just then around the corner came a young fellow with an even more ridiculous poster pluned to his back. Reing ignorant of his own decoration the youngster immediately began laughing at the older man-

"So I fell to moralizing." says Dr. Taylor, "deducing something like this: 'Could we had see curacives as others | see us, we would often change the theme of our discourse.' ORIGIN OF THE PEARL.

The Ancients Thought It Was a Drop of Dew From Heaven.

No record exists or even tradition as to the discovery of the first pearl. The mystery of its origin has doubtiess contributed in no small degree to render it the prime favorite that it has ever been in the eves of the orientals.

From time immemorial the nations of antiquity have used the pearl to decorate their persons and adorn their temples and we find many curious bellefs existing as to its origin. The one most prevalent in Pliny's time was that pearls were formed from the dews | it." of heaven, failing into the open shells at breeding time, and it was in allusion to this pretty conceit that a noble Vene tian lady named Corraro had a gold medal struck (bearing the date 1620) on the reverse side of which is an open shell receiving the drops of dew from heaven which form into pearls as they fall. The motto was "Rore divino"

(by the divine dow). In these more practical but less poetle days the generally accepted theory is that some foreign substance, possibly even a grain of sand, having by accl dent entered the shell of the oyster, # certain amount of irritation is induced which causes the exudation of a pearly secretion (known as pacre), and this effectually covers up the intruder, and also that with the growth of the oyster the pearl increases in size. The pearl, unlike all other goms, re-then Exploited His Views on the Um of a Check Book.

During a financial stringency some years ago a Swedish farmer in one of the middle west states had sold some hogs on the local market and upon receiving his check in payment immediately went to the local bank to centize on his sale. Upon presentment of the check the banker said to him, "Do you wish the money on this check ?"

"Vell, I tank I yust so vell take bim," was the quick reply.

"You really want the money?" "Yah, I tank I take the mon-e." "But do you really need the money?" asked the banker.

"Vell, no; I don't exactly need him, but I tank I take the mon-e."

"Well." said the banker, "If you really want the money of course I will give it to you, but I thought if you did not need it perhaps you might open an account and deposit the money and then check against it as you needed

"Den ven I send my sheeks here you will refuse to pay dem." "Oh, no, we won't. If you open the account we will pay your checks whenever they come in." This seemed assuring to the Swede, and he said, "Vell, if you pays my shecks, den 1 open de account." And the account was opened and passbook and check book handed to the new customer.

Half an hour later a close friend of the new depositor appeared at the rashler's window and presented a sheek signed by his friend for the full amount of the deposit, which was promptly paid by the banker without comment.

In about an hour the Swede appeared and, walking up to the cashier's window, handed the banker his check book minus only one check, with the romark, "Vell, I don't tank I needs him may more."

The Girl and the Artist.

A young woman sat for a crayou portrait and was not entirely pleased with the result.

"It looks like me, of course," she said reluctantly to the artist, "and yet I think there are some things about it that ought to be changed." She sug gested that the eyes should have more of an upward look, that the bracelet should be a little more prominent on her left arm and that her gown be arranged more artistically on the side.

"That would require a great deal of retouching," said the artist, "and I should have to charge you at least $15 additional."

"Oh, dear?" she exclaimed, somewhat peeved. "I shall have to give it up, Father wouldn't stand my 'retouching' him to that extent."-Lipplncott's.
