LATEST SOCIETY GAME.

fambourello Is Taking the Place of Lawn Tennis Among the Swell Clubs.

A new game has invaded the ranks of society and seems destined to spread much as ping-pong did a few years ago. It bears the somewhat suphonious name of tambourello, deriving the name from the instrument of the play, which is nothing more or less than a tambourine. The game is played exactly like lawn tennis, the difference being that instead of a racket a tambourine is used.

But this difference is a big one, as anyhody who has ever played lawn tennis will readily understand. That the game has prospects of becoming popular is evidenced by the fact that two clubs have recently made application to the London county council for per-...ission to play tambourello in the parks under the council's control, and this permission has been readily accorded, says the London Daily Mail.

The physical exercise afforded by tambourello is considerable, and to hit the ball with such an awkward instrument requires a remarkably strong wrist. Nothing but practice can develop this particular type, which will later no doubt be known as the tambourello wrist. The tambourine, by the way, if the player so wishes, can be fitted with the usual bells, which will lend a musical accompaniment to the game. The sounds produced by four players with bell-fitted tambourines would certainly be an adidtion to the game and to the lady player would probably prove particularly attractive.

While tambourello will probably become very popular among the gentler sex, men will also find in the game a pastime at which it is by no means easy to become an accomplished player.

Beginners find it very hard to return a ball over the net at all. When they make their first attempts the tambourine lacks driving power-or apparently lacks it until the secret of its driving capabilities has been diccovered. It takes some practice to make the discovery, but when the trick of driving the ball has been learned immense impetus can be given it with the tambourine.

The game in the London parks will, of course, be played on grass, but an asphalt court offers better facilities. Volleying cannot be indulged in, and a slow court, as a grass court often is, especially after rain, does not permit of a good back game. Lady players will especially appreciate the advantages of of playing from the back of the court, for it is doubtful if ever they could develop the tambourello wrist sufficiently to enable them to volley to any great extent. As yet there is no recognized tambourello champion, but doubtless next season will see his or her arrival.

BONDS OWNED AT HOME.

United States Securities Are for the Most Part in the Possession of Our Own People.

Probably fewer United States bonds are owned outside of the country than those of any other first-class nation in the world. This is largely accounted for by the fact that the bonds have a peculiar value to the national banks as a basis for circulation which raises their market price to a point where they cease to be desirable for ordinary investors. The total of bonds held by foreigners today is $15,055,750, says the New York Post. Of this amount individuals own less than $4,000,000; the rest belong to foreign insurance companies doing business in the United States. Before a foreign insurance company can do business in the United States it must deposit with the insurance commissioner of the particular state it seeks to invade a certain amount of bonds, registered in the name of the insurance commissioner for the benefit of the policy holders of the company in that state. Thus, if the Phoenix Insurance company, of London, England, desires to do business in Ohio it deposits with the insurance commissioner an amount of bonds determined by the value of business, inscribed as follows: "The insurance commissioner of the state of Ohio. in trust for the policy holders of the Phoenix Insurance company of London, England, residing in Ohio. " Of the individual foreign holdings of United States bonds nearly half of them, for some reason, are in Cuba. Our neighbors are doubtless attracted by the security which the bond offers.

In the earlier stages of the country's history large blocks of its bonds were held abroad and branches of the treasury department were opened in London for their transfer and exchange. The French people to-day are great holders of the bonds of various other nations, but they are handling very few of the United States. Quite a part of the loan made by the last Cleveland administration went into the hands of foreign investors at an early date in its history. But with the increasing means of the American people and the growing demand of the national banks, these securities have begun to come back, until now the world may be searched almost in vain for them.
