

BAIL IS FORFEITED

A Warrant Is Issued For Arrest of McKinley.

HOGS NOW SERVING SENTENCE

Must Serve Four Months in Multnomah County Jail and Pay a Fine of $500.

Horace G. McKinley's name figured prominently in the court proceedings at Portland Saturday. On motion of Prosecutor Heney, the bond of McKinley was forfeited in two land fraud cases, in one of which he was convicted, and a bench warrant was issued for his arrest. McKinley is at present in Shanghai, China, safe from extradition. The bond in the case in which he was convicted was $4000, and the sureties are Eugene Blazier and John Grant, friends of McKinley while he was treading the primrose path.

Marie Ware McKinley, wife of the fugitive, appeared in court, and by her attorney, Lou Tarpley, entered a plea of not guilty in case No. 2887, in which she was indicted jointly with S. A. D. Pater, Horace G. McKinley, Mrs. Emma Watson and several others.

At the request of the government, severance was granted for Congressman Binger Hermann and J. N. Williamson in the Blue mountain reserve case. This is the case in which State Senator Franklin Pierce Mays goes to trial August 6. Proceedings against Hermann and Williamson were postponed until the next term of court.

When the case of Martin G. Hoge was called, Special Assistant Attorney General Heney, who has conducted the prosecution, arose and said that Dr. K. A. J. McKenzie had informed him that Hoge's present condition of health is not such as to enable him to withstand imprisonment without danger of injury and decline. The illness was only temporary, but the difficulty in the way of postponement of sentence lay in the fact that Hoge could give no bond. A short sentence would satisfy the law.

"If it were not for his health," added Prosecutor Heney, "I would urge that he be given the maximum of punishment, as he is an attorney-at-law, one whose sworn duty should have prevented him from advising persons to offend against the government."

Hoge told of his present condition of health, said that his mother and her two brothers died of consumption, that his mother was bedridden 13 or 15 years and that for 10 of those years he looked after her.

Judge Hunt remarked that it did not take a physician to see that Hoge was a man of delicate health.

"I fear long imprisonment would imperil your life," he, added addressing Hoge.

The prisoner, clutching at a straw, said that he thought he could raise a small amount of fine, somewhere near the maximum, if that were made his sentence. He would have said more, but the court cut him short.

Remarks on the duty of lawyers preceded the passing of sentence. Judge Hunt spoke of the present being an age of commercialism and that many thinking men were of the opinion that this instinct had caused a quiescence, if not a decadence, in the profession of the law. It being a time when attorneys should speak out clearly for the right. It was with pain that he was confronted by an attorney who had proved recalcitrant to his duty. Telling Hoge that it was solely due to his physical condition that a light sentence would be imposed, Judge Hunt advised him to go back to Medford after he regains his freedom and build a new and better reputation in the community in which he was disgraced. Then Hoge was sentenced to serve four months in the county jail and pay a fine of $500.

As Hoge has no money, his sentence means that he will spend five months in jail. The additional month will enable him to go into court and take the paper's oath, thus compelling the government to release him without the payment of a fine.

WIMPEY NOW IN THE TOILS

Marsh Weakens and Implicates Pal in Horsestealing Case.

A. C. Wimpey, implicated with William Marsh, in stealing three head of horses from Dr. J. A. Gross, was arrested at Starbuck last Friday night on telegraph instructions from the sheriff's office, says the Walla Walla Statesman. Sheriff Painter left for Starbuck Saturday morning and returned in the evening with Wimpey.

Marsh, who was brought to Walla Walla by Deputy Haviland last night, was put through the sweating process and finally confessed to the theft of the Gross horses and implicated Wimpey, who formerly worked with Marsh on the Gross ranch. Marsh told the officers where Wimpey could be located and a telegram was hurriedly sent to the constable at Starbuck to arrest the man. Wimpey was found close to town and offered no resistance when placed under arrest. He was locked up in the Starbuck jail and the Walla Walla officers notified.

Sheriff Painter and Deputy Haviland are highly elated over their success in running down Marsh and Wimpey as it ends a case that has puzzled the officers for nearly a month. Wimpey was first suspected of the theft and was being closely watched when Deputy Haviland learned that Marsh had sold the stolen horses near Lind. The officers immediately had him arrested and once in the county jail Marsh soon weakened.

Marsh told the officers that he and Wimpey arrived in Walla Walla from Starbuck the night the horses were stolen. They came in on the train and went to a second-hand store and there bought two saddles. They went to the corral near the Garden City Heights where the Gross horses were being kept, and after selecting the three best animals of the lot, opened the gate and let the other horses out. They saddled two of the horses and leading the other, started out for Franklin county, traveling after night. The horses were kept in the vicinity of Lind until sold.

Marsh entered a plea of guilty before Judge Brouts and was sentenced to 18 months imprisonment in the penitentiary. He will be removed to the prison tomorrow to begin his sentence.
