FARM AND ORCHARD
Notes and Instructions from Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations of Oregon and Washington, Specially Suitable to Pacific Coast Conditions

Sheep Raising in Oregon.
By E. L. Potter, Head of Animal Husbandry Department, O. A. C.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis—The wool industry of the United States is one of very great importance. We produce in this country about 325 million pounds of wool, which is worth to the farmers something over 60 million dollars. This enormous amount of wool, however, does not meet the demands of the American people. Our mills consume approximately 500 million pounds. This extra amount must be imported from some foreign country. Australia is the greatest wool producing country in the world, producing about three times as much wool as the United States. South America also produces about twice as much as is produced in the United States.

The production of wool is so intimately connected with the raising of mutton that the two cannot be separated. In the raising of beef cattle the production of milk is almost entirely overlooked, while in the production of milk the beef end of the industry is of practically no importance. The sheep, however, is strictly a dual purpose animal, and in practically no must go hand in hand and the question of which predominates will depend very largely upon conditions under which the sheep are managed.

May Grow Cauliflower Out of Doors All Year Round

Cauliflower that will grow out of doors all the year and that matures before the Christmas holiday season, has been grown by Professor John W. Hotson, of the department of botany in the University of Washington, after continued experiments.

Four varieties of the species have been found, all of them belonging to the family of broccoli. The seed, which Professor Hotson got from England, is planted out of doors about May 1, is transplanted again the middle of June, and matures for the first time about December 15. The second date of maturity is some time in January.

The advantage in growing this vegetable, according to Professor Hotson, is that the use of greenhouse or hotbed facilities is obviated, all the growth taking place naturally under outdoor conditions. Professor Hotson says the vegetable thrives excellently in the Puget Sound climate.

Oregon Farmers Judging Sheep at O. A. C. Short Course.

case has it proven possible to raise sheep for either mutton or wool exclusively. According to the report of the tariff board for the year 1910, the average receipts per head of sheep in the United States west of the Missouri river was $2.44. Of this amount $1.05 was derived from wool and $1.39 from other sources; thus for all the sheep west of the Missouri river, which includes approximately seventy per cent of the sheep in the United States, the income from wool amounts to forty-three per cent of the total gross income.

This proportion varies a good idea when we compare different flocks. It perhaps varies some with the different states of our Northwest, but in no case do the receipts from wool exceed the receipts from other sources. In the states east of the Missouri river the proportion of the income derived from wool is somewhat less. At the same time it is a large and important item. In much of our Western country the ranchmen say that they are raising sheep for wool, while some farmers in the Eastern states say that they are raising sheep for wool, while some farmers in the Eastern states will say that they are raising sheep for mutton.

Such statements, of course, are not designed to be taken literally. It is true that many of our Western ranchmen manage their sheep primarily with the idea of the greatest possible production of wool and take such income from other sources as they may happen to get. In the management of their flocks and in the selection of their sheep, these men consider the quantity and quality of the wool the prime factor, while on the farms of the eastern states the farmers manage their sheep and select breeding stock almost entirely from the standpoint of mutton production.

It has been found, however, that neither extreme works to the best advantage. Sheep breeders have so far been unable to develop a strain of wool producing sheep which will produce enough more wool than the average sheep to make the cost of mutton negligible, nor have they been able to produce a strain of mutton sheep of sufficient merit for that quality alone that they can neglect the wool end of the industry. A detailed study of the books of a very large number of northwestern sheep raisers by the Tariff board shows, however, that as an average those sheep men who derive the larger percentage of their income from other than wool are, on the whole, making a larger interest on their capital than those that do not derive so much of their income from these other sources. This would indicate that our western sheep men are on the whole devoting rather too little attention to the production of mutton. This, of course, does not mean that the wool production must be forgotten, but both

Free Camp and School For Prize-Winning Boys

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis—All aboard for Salem. One whole week of camping, special lessons, drills and games at the State Fair. Two boys from each county, 68 in all, who have excelled in some form of industrial club work will be invited to take the train for this week's work and pleasure, which will be provided without expense to them.

There are no limitations as to what the projects shall be or who are eligible to compete, provided they are members of the industrial club. All that is required is that they shall excel in some form of industrial club work. The winners will be given a week of camping and school work, admittance to the fair, mess and shelter, absolutely free.

Railway fare to Salem at reduced rates, and an inexpensive, serviceable uniform are the only necessary expenses not covered by a special appropriation of $500 made by the Oregon State board of fair directors. It is expected that local and county school and club officers will provide traveling expenses, and possibly the funds for purchasing cadet uniforms, costing about $3.00.

Boys who enter the contest and try to win, will win whether they gain the trip or not. The very things necessary to win are the things that are in themselves worth most to the boys, so there is no chance to lose. The free camp and school were designed to awaken so deep an interest in the useful industries that great good will come to all who try for the camp and school prize.

HOW WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

pained me so for several years that I expected to have to undergo an operation, but the first bottle I took of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of the pains in my side and I continued its use until I became regular and free from pains. I had asked several doctors if there was anything I could take to help me and they said there was nothing that they knew of. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."
—Mrs. C. H. GRIFFITH, 7305 Madison Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Hanover, Pa.—"I suffered from female trouble and the pains were so bad at times that I could not sit down. The doctor advised a severe operation but my husband got me Lydia E. What joy and happiness it is to be well once more. I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Compound."
