AN INVESTMENT FOR CLACKAMAS COUNTY

Purely from an investment or selfish viewpoint, a large part of Oregon should and no doubt will roll up big majorities for the world's fair millage tax.

Portland came through with better than a 4 to 1 vote, because the voters believe that the 1925 exposition and its year of building will be a big thing for the city.

It will mean much for the Willamette valley, much for the Columbia river sections east and west of Portland, and indirectly it will do wonders in the way of advertising for a great state that has only eight people to the square mile.

And the fair will benefit Clackamas county directly as much as any part of Oregon outside of Multnomah county. This city will be jammed with the overflow during the whole duration of the fair, and if our commercial organizations do not make something out of such a situation in the way of showing visitors what the county has, then it is their fault.

The hundreds of thousands of people who will come to the exposition will make a great market for the state and produce that now rots should find a ready cash market.

We believe that every voter in Clackamas county will get far more than his tax levy back out of the fair if he is alive enough to get it.

We believe it is a proposition for this county and this part of the state to get behind and put over, from an investment point of view only.—Banner-Courier.

This town is quite a shipping point for wool, cream, hops, grain, hay, wood, etc. The two warehouses here, the wood yard and hop buyers, generally keep busy loading cars. The past week Mr. Bents has been loading cars of hops, Zeigler's and Giesy's warehouses loading hay and potatoes and Mr. Class loading wood. A shipping point on the main line.

LIVING IN THE OPEN

Living in a city is a mild sort of insanity. In New York, for instance, girls are being taught in public schools how to keep house in small, cramped flats and apartments. And it is necessary, too, for the tendency now is for people to congest more thickly in the cities.

Somehow we feel it's going to be a red-letter day for America when the tide turns from the cities to the small towns and the farms, with fresh air, good health, pure milk for the babies, independent life, glorious nature and boundless playgrounds for the kiddies.

Only those who have lived away from the cramped and crowded houses of our large cities can really know the comfort of living. Packed in the modern apartment like sardines in a box, as the modern city family is generally packed, isn't healthful, economical or a happy mode of living.

Of course, it wouldn't do for everyone to start for the farms and small cities at once. We've got to have cities. But sometimes the tide may turn, and slowly but steadily each year the trend may be toward the open. When it does we predict that those who are first to seek life where it can be more comfortably lived will be the very type of citizens needed in our rural districts, a sensible hopeful class of people, the kind worth having as neighbors, and onto the farms will go enthusiastic workers who will make good from the start and who will make America a still greater nation.
