LUMBER MEN ARE OPTIMISTIC

kers is that the war will continue for a long time. They see no possibility of an early cessation of the gigantic struggle. When the war ends that will be the crucial period for the United States. Some fear severe competition when the war is over. Some think it will be necessary for Europe to continue buying American goods to make quick rehabilitation. In the reconstruction period will come the real test to America. Most bankers think America is prepared for most anything which will happen.

"When lumber is depressed here, real estate, groceries, shoes, supplies of all kinds are also depressed. You men constitute the bone and sinew of this section of the country. You have duties to perform. You have employes and they have families. The whole lumber business depends upon the quality of the service you give to yourselves and the community. You are organized to make money, but you must each possess something of the milk and honey of human kindness toward your employes and the country at large if you wish to succeed.

"Don't be over optimistic, but at the same time don't do too much worrying."

William G. Harrington spoke on "Opportunity." He declared it is here now, lies in the future and must be fought for.

"Opportunity," he said, "frequently comes through misfortune. It's the man who can see it when it comes that way and makes the most of it who wins." He predicted that when the war ends and the reconstruction period begins, there will be a tremendous demand for lumber. He advocated aggressive advertising as the best means to educate the people to the uses of timber, wood blocks for paving and the like.

"Go after business," he told his hearers, "and believe absolutely in the future."

California lumber interests want to secure the Washington building and have it transferred to the San Diego exposition for the purpose of maintaining a permanent lumber exhibit during the next year. The advertising committee were appointed to act for the association. Fruit and mining men are opposing it. They want to get in, too.

The statement was made that the Northern Pacific railroad is now enjoying the most prosperous business it has ever known and will break all records shortly.

Forthy thousand dollars has already been signed up in the Pacific Northwest for advertising shingles of a certain copyrighted brand throughout the country. The total sum desired is $60,000.

Resolutions were adopted whereby the association endorsed the plan of placing foreign and safe sea-going vessels under American registry and allowing them to engage in intercoastal and offshore trade. The scarcity of all kinds of vessels is proving a serious handicap to lumber interests.

It was reported the Northern Pacific is to place orders for 40,000,000 feet of various kinds of lumber. Some of it will be wanted here next month. A few mills reported securing their share at the new advanced prices.
