S. E. BARTNESS.
A jolly party of town people visited the falls below the ice house last Sunday and had their pictures taken scattered around promiscuously among the rocks.

The President Here.

Oregon maintained her reputation during the president's visit, for he came in like the wild ducks, with the storm, and it remained and abided with him until he arrived at Hood River where he got his first glimpse of sunshine. He also got a cordial reception and a hearty welcome, the depot platform and grounds being crowded with patriotic citizens, the militia company, Relief Corps members of the G. A. R. post, and school children. Ex-governor Moody who accompanied the presidential party, introduced Hon. E. L. Smith to the president, and the latter made a brief address none of which could be heard for the noise. A committee of three little girls Irma Coe, Fay LaFrance and Melle Olinger on behalf of the school presented Mrs. Harrison some beautiful bouquets of wild flowers, and others pressing forward it looked for a little while as though the car would be loaded with floral offerings. Mr. Wannamaker was called for and made a brief speech, saying he was surprised to see so many beautiful girls way up here in the mountains and cast his eagle glance around as though he would like to stay with us. Hood River had a little reception of her own which was a pleasant surprise to the presidential party, as the stop here was not down on the bills.

BAKER CITY OR. May 2, 1891.

EDITOR GLACIER:
I once heard of a man who kept a large pack of hounds, and took great delight in listening to them when on the trail, so he invited a friend to join him on one of these occasions, and as the hounds were passing by and pressing hard on the track, he said "Is not that grand? Do you hear the music?" Whereupon his friend replied that he "could not hear the music for the noise." And when I arrived at Baker City and looked upon the town after reading what its boomers had said of it, I thought of this old hunter's music, and his friend, for I couldn't see the city for the houses scattered over the country. These houses are scattered over about four sections of sagebrush, and there is not enough material in all of them to build five blocks of city buildings. The facts are, Baker City's boom was built too high, without a foundation, and it toppled over; and while the promulgators of the scheme may have escaped with money in their pockets, there were many people caught in the ruins, and it will be a long while before the wounds are all healed, and the wreckage cleared away unless the Seven Devils prove a greater blessing than they did to "Mary Magdalene." Baker City is a very good business center and has some very fine stores and business buildings but such flagrant misrepresentations of facts are productive of evil and should be exposed. This sage brush land is as hard to clear as the oak lands of Hood River, but if cleared and properly irrigated, will no doubt be productive of reasonable results.

It is said that an eastern company is going to expend $100,000 in constructing storage reservoirs and ditches for irrigation purposes, and if this could be done and sufficient water obtained it would make Baker one of the finest valleys in Oregon, but talk is so cheap in this country that a man outside the ring never knows anything for certain. One thing however is assured that Baker City is to have a large saw mill, for Mr. John Stoddard of Hood River, is building a mill for the company which he represents and although there is no timber in sight we are informed he intends building a twenty-five mile railroad to extend into the mountains over which the logs will be carried.
The mines are opening up as the mountain snows recede and Baker's busiest season will soon be on.

Four Miles to School.
STRAIGHTSBURG, OR., May 5.

EDITOR GLACIER:
I have been living in hopes the last seven years of getting settlers around us, and to get a school for our children, but it is no use. I have given up the hope. The speculators have taken all the land of any account and by such parties who do not benefit our schools or anything else. We do not want such parties at all, we want men who work the land and stay there. This thing of living in the city and then visiting the shanty they have built on the land won't hardly do according to law. A little patch plowed around the shanty looks bad. One claim has a few trees cut down, no clearing or not any to speak of and the house was there when taken, and all the improvements on the place can be paid by one old brass watch and it is done with a watch. All there is to it is the land is taken and sold to the parties as above, and then the locator goes smiling how sleek he got the lands. Just think how easily made is the money, by staying over the winter in a shanty and then sell for $400 or $500 and do nothing. I should smile, and this right by our noses. We have all got to work hard for our profits, but one thing we are here to stay. We don't want to sell and we don't want to go to Missouri. We that have been here this last seven or eight years want to stay in Hood River. H.

A LEGEND.

There has come to my mind a legend, a thing I had half forgot,
And whether I read it or dreamed it, ah, well, it matters not.
It is said that in heaven at twilight a great bell softly swings,
And men may listen and hear to the wonder-ful music that rings.
If he puts from his heart's inner chamber all the passion, pain and strife,
Heartache, and weary longing that throbs in the pulses of life—
If he thrust from his soul all hatred, all thoughts of wicked things,
He can hear in the holy twilight how the bell of the angels rings.
And I think there is in this legend, if we open our eyes to see,
Somewhat of an inner meaning, my friend, to you and me.
Let us look in our hearts and question, Can pure thoughts enter in
To a soul if it be already the dwelling of thoughts of sin?
So then let us ponder a little; let us look in our hearts and see
If the twilight bells of the angels could ring for us—you and me.
