MRS. COPPLE HAS REMARKABLE PULLETS

Mrs. Claude E. Copple, according to local poultry fanciers, has one of the most remarkable flocks of young pullets in the Northwest. Mrs. Copple has 100 purebred White Leghorn pullets that came from the incubator on April 3. On July 17 one of them laid an egg. Now 25 of the pullets are laying every day. The eggs are as large as those of adult hens.

Mrs. Copple has been engaged several years in building up a flock of heavy laying chickens. She is practicing tramping for the elimination of "boarders." The pullets now engaged in such precocious laying are descended from a hen that has a record of 320 eggs in a year.

Mrs. Copple's flock of chickens has begun to attract a widespread attention. Mrs. Balkman, of Calgary, Ont., here the other day, had heard of them. Numerous callers have visited the East Side place recently. Mrs. Copple says that callers are always welcome.

Forest Rangers Are Efficient

The forest service has an efficient set of men on the job in this county. The season is now well over and but few fires, and only one of them of alarming proportions, have been reported. According to Raymond E. Smith, who is with the forestry service in the Lost Lake region, cigarette stubs cause many fires. He writes: "I just reported a fire that had been started by somebody's carelessness in throwing a lighted cigarette stub from a moving automobile. This habit has caused a good many fires this summer."

Many Huckleberries Picked

According to estimates of members of picking parties, local folk have returned since Saturday with close to 2,000 gallons of huckleberries from the bush-covered areas around Lost Lake. "I believe there were fully 150 automobiles in the forest around Lost Lake Sunday," says Harry W. Farrell, who was with a recreation party of 13. "Most of the cars on the return were loaded with the luscious fruit. The forestry service on Saturday opened to picking a big area just west of the lake."

KING KLEAGLE GIVES KU KLUX DATA

(From the Oregonian)

Shorn of nightie, pillow case and Cyclopedia with the big feet, old King Kleagle Powell, himself, of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, still holds forth in the Multnomah hotel, intent on organizing a powerful band of followers in Oregon.

Devoid of mystic fol-de-rol, King Kleagle is not a bad sort, and displays a very engaging smile.

"How many members does the klan claim in Portland?"

"A thousand or two," was the rather indefinite assurance of the ne plus ultra of the local branch of the invisible empire, when seen recently.

But organizers are active throughout the state and every community soon will have its little band of riders, promised Kleagle. But he did not call them "riders." In the River city the Ku Kluxer probably motors to the home of his victim, with faithful clansmen heating the tar in the tonneau.

King Kleagle did not have much information to impart. He appeared to think that prior august communications have been treated with far too much levity. Organization of the Ku Klux Klan is a serious matter to King Kleagle. Even "kings" must cut. A "second or two" members at $10 each are not to be scoffed at. And should the thousands meant into the twenty thousands, what joy it would bring to the auk of the imperial wizard at Atlanta, Ga., to say nothing of Tim-Bo-Tim at room 553, Multnomah hotel!

Thus it was that a momentary expression of surprise, mingled with caution, flashed across the not unpleasing countenance of King Kleagle when a reporter announced his inquisitive mission.

Hardly had this conversation started when a genial gentleman with cold eyes, seated at the far corner of King Kleagle's sanctum, started a little in terror of his own. He scented $10 in the offing, mayhap. Was the visitor a member of a certain fraternal organization? He was not. Of course, the intruder understood that membership in that lodge was not a prerequisite of entrance to the Klan? Yes, yes. Did the young man understand the sublime principles underlying the Ku Klux Klan? Very vaguely. He was not enlightened.

King Kleagle interrupted the interrogator, who might have been Cyclops, for his feet filled the bill, or even Tim-Bo-Tim, himself.

"Take this to your employers and tell them I will appreciate any facilities they care to give me," King Kleagle commanded the local wizard, handing the visitor a typewritten document. There was an air of finality about the tone which tended to terminate the interview.

"To all lovers of law and order, peace and justice, and to all the people of the United States," began the proclamation. King Kleagle flattered The Oregonian circulation department.

It was signed by William Joseph Simmons, none other than the imperial wizard of all kingdoms, and was written in Atlanta, Ga. It bore two headings, possibly the result of some architectural dispute. One read, "Imperial Castle," the other, "Imperial Palace." It left no doubt that the document was prepared in the domicile of the chief gazook.

The wizard, it appeared, had discovered "an apparent nation-wide attempt through the public statements in the press and conduct of lawless citizens and traitors within our ranks" to discredit the knights in the public eye. Therefore the supreme committee, it seemed, composed "of citizens of unquestioned character from the states of New York, Illinois, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and elsewhere," had decided that the imperial bazaar should once again call attention to the real purposes and work of the organization.

Under solemn oath, the wizard avers that the klan "does not encourage or foster lawlessness, racial prejudice or religious intolerance, and is not designed to act in the capacity of a law enforcement or moral correction agency except insofar as the members of the Klan as citizens may be able to assist the regular officers of the law in the apprehending and sustaining of the majesty of the law and the honor and integrity of the stars and stripes and the constitution of America."

"If we are all that our enemies charge, or even one-fourth as wicked as claimed, America has nothing to fear from this organization. For it will perish," is the encouraging comment, introducing the conclusion which has something to say about "the land of the free and home of the brave," "race, color or creed," "peace and happiness" and "liberty and justice."

But those who would criticize are duly warned, "If we are being lied about by those who are unworthy and who are not pure Americans at heart, the time will come when all their falsehood and serious statements will react on them."

Klansmen, the hour has come! Where are them pillows?

FIRST APPLE SALES VARY IN PRICES

There was perhaps more business done in boxed apples at the convention held in Cincinnati last week than at any previous meeting of the International Apple Shippers' Association.

The largest sale made so far as the Packer man could learn was a block of 60,000 boxes of Wenatchee fruit, at the following prices: Extra fancy Newtown Pippins, size 150 or larger, at $1.80 per box; extra fancy Jonathans, size 150, at $1.80 per box; extra fancy Spitsbergen at $1.65 per box; extra fancy Winesaps, sizes 193 or larger, $1.95 per box; extra fancy Delicious, sizes 150 or larger, $2.70 per box. The above prices are lower than other sales reported because of the large quantity.

Other sales were five cars Washington Jonathans, extra fancy, $2.15 per box; eight cars extra fancy Delicious, size 163, or larger, $3.50 per box.

These all were individual sales. One operator sold about 150 cars, mostly Idaho Jonathans and Rome Beauties, extra fancy fruit, the Jonathans at $2.10 and the Romes at $1.90 per box.

The Packer man heard of a total of about 100 additional cars selling in five and ten-car lots at a range covered by the above prices, all fruit sold l. v. l. shipping station.

There was a 50-car sale of Idaho Elberta peaches at $2.50 per bushel.

SCENERY DELIGHTS BROOKLYN EAGLES

Twenty-five New York citizens comprising a Brooklyn Eagle party and made boosters for the Columbia river highway when they were guests of the Portland Chamber of Commerce recently.

Following the luncheon the visitors were taken on a trip through the Hood River Valley. At the hour of 6 Sunday night the Chamber of Commerce committee members were guests of the Eagle party at a dinner in the Columbia Grove hotel. Thereafter the return to Portland was made and the party left for the East.

For a number of years it has been the custom of the Brooklyn Eagle to conduct an annual trip for prominent persons of the city. This season the visitors were taken to Honolulu and the return was being made from that place when the party visited Portland.

The members of the Chamber of Commerce committee who acted as hosts for the eastern visitors are: J. P. Jagger, W. J. Hoffman, H. H. Hayes, Stuart King, M. E. Sneed, D. C. Freeman and O. W. Mielke of Portland, and E. E. Brodie of Oregon City, and Leslie Butler of Hood River.
