to traffic a section of roadway beside a warehouse of the cooperative agency, brought many orchardists to Judge Wilson's court Monday. The plaintiff cooperative agency claims that the strip of land, which witnesses have testified has been used by vehicles for some years, is a county road. The defendant rail line, however, contends that the strip has never been a county road, and that it is a part of its right of way and that it has a right to close it.

Reports Monday morning to the effect that the rail line had begun fencing in the land resulted in court orders that posts be removed at once. County Judge Hasbrouck and Commissioner Blackman, called by the plaintiff concern, testified that the strip in question had been utilized by traffic. Judge Hasbrouck stated that the county roadmaster, on his instructions, had hauled gravel for surfacing it.

Apple shippers here state that they do not understand a recent press dispatch from Washington, D. C., to the effect that the Interstate Commerce Commission had ordered a further suspension in an increased apple tariff.

The general increased tariff on boxed apples, which was scheduled to go into effect January 1, was suspended until June 30.

F. F. Clark, who states that the International Apple Shippers Association and shippers' organizations of the Northwest are constantly beset by tariff demands of rail lines, thinks the dispatch may have referred to a petition of the rail companies for a tariff that will enable them to govern specifications of fruit packages. Mr. Clark states that he has received announcement that the Interstate Commerce Commission will conduct a hearing at Seattle on July 19 of this petition of the rail lines.

The news dispatch, however, Mr. Clark says, may have referred to a petition of the rail companies for a standardized rate on storage in transit shipments. Such cancellation, he states, would automatically permit individual lines to make their own tariffs, as well as from Hood River, and increased expense.

From present indications, Apple Blossom Sunday will be celebrated here this year on May 14. Leroy Childs says that apple trees of the Lower Valley, from present signs, will be in full bloom about that time.

Upper Valley tracts, he says, as a result of the long lasting blankets of snow there, will not bloom until two weeks later. No plans have been announced to date for a celebration, but all residents will invite friends and relatives and observe the annual custom of keeping open house during the week of apple blossoms.

Cherry and peach trees of the lower levels around the city are blooming, and by next week pears in the Lower Valley will be out.
