BULLS AND PUNS.

A Batch of Miffit Sayings and Clever Sallies.

It is odd to charge Lord Beaconsfield with a "bull" in proposing in parliament to make suicide a capital offense. "We only punish those who fall," he said, and laughter drowned the conclusion of the sentence.

Sir Colin Campbell when in India wrote in an official report, "A lot of young fellows come out here, and they drink and eat and die and then write home and tell their friends the climate killed them."

It was once the fashion in Paris to wear the hair "a la Capoul," after the famous singer. Capoul himself went to have his hair done and was asked what style. "A la Capoul," he blushing suggested. His head was examined. "Ah, monsieur, it is not possible. You have not the head for it."

In England Joseph H. Choate became Joseph Choate. "In England," he explained, "I drop the H." The brilliant lawyer Channell, on the other hand, dropped his aspirates in a more usual way. In a trial the judge became confused as to whether the ship involved was the Helen or the Ellen. The lawyer on the other side, Sir Fredric Treigler, gravely explained that she was christened, the Helen, but "lost her h" in the chops of the Channell.

At an ecclesiastical luncheon one of the party, apparently given to dietetic theories, observed as they went in, "Now to put a bridge on our appetites." The bishop of Winchester, who had a good digestion, retorted, "Now to put a bit between my teeth."

The Cunning Actor.
A specialist in dipsomania was talking about the cunning with which dipsomaniacs in confinement will obtain liquor.

"A certain noted but intemperate actor," said Dr. Gresham James, "was once locked up by his manager in order that he might not spoil the evening performance by overdrinking. His confinement was close. Windows, doors—everything was locked and barred."

"But the actor beckoned to a man in the street, showed a greenback and bawled to him through the closed window to go and buy a bottle of brandy and a clay pipe."

"When the man returned with these purchases the actor called:
"Stick the pipe stem in through the keyhole."

"This was done.
"Now," said the actor, "pour the brandy carefully into the bowl."
"As the fluid fell into the bowl the actor sucked it up, and when his manager came to release him that evening he lay in a corner quite gloriously drunk."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Way It Read.

The editor of a little paper was in the habit of cheering up his subscribers daily with a column of short pertinent comments on their town, their habits and themselves. The department was the most popular thing in the paper.

The editor, as he saw it growing in favor, gradually allowed himself a wider latitude in his remarks until the town passed much of its time conjecturing "what he'd say" to say next."

On a hot day when the sun whistled gayly up the street of the town, depositing everywhere its burden of sand, the editor brought forth this gem of thought:

"All the windows along Main street need washing badly."
The next morning he was waited on by a plebeian of indignant citizens, who confronted him with the paragraph in question fresh from the hands of the compositor and informed him severely that he had gone too far. After a hasty and hurried glance he admitted that he had. It now read:

"All the windows along Main street need washing badly."—Everybody's.

His Mother's Ruse Failed.

A Kansas City professional man, who is prominently identified with Missouri politics, tells the following story on himself:

"My folks moved from Indiana to Johnson county, Mo., when I was six years of age. We settled on a farm near Holden. The first Sunday we were there and while the family was preparing for Sunday school it was discovered that I did not have any shoes. My mother, realizing that 'folks would talk' if one of her children made his first public appearance barefooted, suggested that I have a cloth tied around one foot to create the impression that I was unable to wear shoes because of a sore foot. So the rag was tied on me. Everything went along smoothly, and I learned all about bears eating the bad children up when I heard a snicker from a boy I afterward liked. He was pointing to my right foot. I glanced downward.

"The rag had slipped off, and my mother's ruse was exposed."—Kansas
