The Surprised Miser.
"A certain old miser, though a millionaire," said a Washington man, "insisted on wearing the shabbiest kind of clothes. An old family friend endeavored one day to persuade the miser to dress better."
"I am surprised," he said, "that you should let yourself become so shabby."
"But I am not shabby," said the miser.

"Oh, but you are," said the family friend. "Remember your father. He was always neatly, even elegantly, dressed. His clothes were very handsome."
"The miser gave a loud laugh."
"Why," he shouted triumphantly, "these clothes I've got on were father's!"

English Coal in the Old Days.
In former times England did not hesitate to regulate the sale of coal in the interests of the poor. In 1655, when the duty on coal in London was 1 shilling (25 cents) a chaldron (generally thirty-six bushels), Cromwell granted the city corporation a license to import 400 chaldrons duty free every year for the poor citizens. At the same time it was provided that the city companies should lay up stores of coal in summer (from three to 675 chaldrons, as they were able), to be retailed in the winter in small quantities. And in order to prevent extortion, conspiracy and monopoly retail dealers were prohibited under penalties from contracting for coal or meeting the coal vessels before they reached London.

The Black Cap Judge.
Judge Hawkins, an English judge of the last century, who was a horsey man, was reminded even on the race course of his reputation as a hanging judge. His friend, Lord Palmouth, was running two horses in the same race under magpie colors, and to distinguish the second he ordered Archer, the jockey, to wear a black cap. But a black cap was nowhere to be found at the moment when the race was due. At this moment Judge Hawkins emerged from the "bird cage" and was recognized by Archer, who shouted out to Fordham: "We are all right now, here comes Harry Hawkins, and he is sure to have a black cap in his pocket!"

The Three Laws of Motion.
The three laws of motion are: (1) If a body be at rest, it will remain at rest unless it is compelled by some external force to change its state, and similarly, if it be in motion, it will continue to move in a straight line and at a uniform velocity forever unless its state of motion be affected by some external force. (2) Change of motion of any body is proportional to the external force that causes it and takes place in the straight line in which the force acts. (3) To every action there is always an equal and contrary reaction, or the mutual action of any two bodies are always equal and oppositely directed. This law is often briefly stated thus: Action and reaction are equal.—New York American.

The Word Journal.
Is it a loose application of language to apply the word "journal" to a publication issued every week or month? Probably not, since the idea of the word seems to have been that the news sheet was a diary, a record of day by day events, rather than that it appeared daily itself. The very first regular newspaper, indeed, is considered to have been the Frankfurter Journal, which appeared in 1615 as a weekly publication. If newspapers were compelled to adhere with literal accuracy to their titles all "gazettes" would sell for a cent, since that is what "gazette" originally signified. The Venetian Gazette of the sixteenth century, the parent of all the "gazettes," took its name from a coin of about that value.

Made Her Feel Old.
"I suppose I am past what my mother calls the first flush of youth," said the bachelor girl, "but I think I shall never feel older than I did one summer evening about five years ago. And now the girl I was in those days seems absurdly young to the woman I am now." And she sighed and was silent a moment under the burden of her years.
"It was that summer at Lake George," she went on presently, "and we were at the Greenes' cottage for a couple of weeks. Jack Greene was home from college, and as he was the only man and I the only girl we naturally were thrown together constantly. He was just at the age to feel himself vastly superior, somewhere about nineteen. He had been growing sentimental in a patronizing sort of way, and one evening after a semitender passage or two he abruptly asked me, 'I told him twenty-three. He seemed stunned for a moment, and, looking up, he studied me carefully in the lamplight, then, shaking his head sadly, pronounced his verdict: "My, but you are well preserved!"'—Saturday Evening Post.
