KLAMATH FALLS, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1908.

THEY HEAR HANLY.

Governor J. Frank Hanly caused the greatest political sensation in Indiana in years last week by unexpectedly calling an extra session of the legislature to assemble in Indianapolis September 18, in the midst of the presidential campaign.

Hanly's term expires the first of the year and he has demanded many reforms which he has not been able to secure. Recently the friends of James E. Watson, the Republican candidate to succeed Hanly, promised the governor that they would carry out his plans if he would stump the state for Watson. Hanly agreed to this and it was announced that he would not try further to enforce his demand for reform legislation.

Later, the governor heard that Watson's friends were laughing at their promises behind his back and the result was his call for the extra session.

The governor's action means the precipitation of a terrible battle within the party ranks this fall and there is great excitement at Republican headquarters.

Hanly's step is taken to mean that he will not support Watson unless the legislature quickly submits to his will and does as he says. It is probable that the members will assemble in an ugly mood and a remarkable session is certain to result.

The leaders score the governor on the ground that the meeting of the legislature will take the members away from their districts when their presence is most needed to carry on the campaign.

The decision of the governor recalls vividly his threat when he was hissed off the stage at the Republican national convention. He was presenting the name of Vice-President Fairbanks before the convention in opposition to Taft, when the hoots and cat calls of the delegates finally forced him to stop speaking. He shook his fist at the convention and declared:

"You will be glad to hear from me after the convention. I will make it burn for Taft and his forces in Indiana this fall. You will regret this action and you'll hear from me before November 3."

PUT CHILDREN TO SCHOOL.

It is the practice in Oregon to postpone the opening of the public schools until the hop harvest is over, thus serving the convenience of the large number of families that work in the hop fields. Since this policy is pursued, all parents should plan to have their children ready for school when the opening day arrives. Every child who has not completed the eighth grade should be in school this fall, unless too young. Those who have completed the eighth grade should be in school unless there is a high school within reach, unless they are learning a trade or are engaged in other useful occupations. Oregon has a good compulsory education law, which is largely self-executory. But no parent should need the influence of a compulsory education law. Every child should have a common school education. While it is wiser to teach some children trades rather than to keep them in school after they have completed the eighth grade any child is better off in high school than on the streets.

Oregon's public school system is recognized as one of the best in the United States. Oregon is one of the lowest states in the list when illiteracy is considered. While a good record of this kind is one to be proud of, the real effort should be not merely to teach every person to read and write, which is the test of literacy and illiteracy, but also to read understandingly and write well. The more extensive the education the larger the general fund of information which enables a person to understand and enjoy what he reads. In proportion to population, few states are better supplied with excellent preparatory schools and colleges than is Oregon. These institutions, together with the large number of high schools, place within reach of almost every energetic young man or woman an education as thorough as necessary. In these schools young people may be well fitted for business or professional careers. Young people can find here at home almost anything they desire in the way of educational opportunity. Let the most be made of the opportunities that offer.—Oregonian.

THE PASSING OF THE COUNTRY DOCTOR.

Listen now. There aren't any more country doctors, but such as live in towns and serve the farmers will tell you, the first thing they say about their practice, that they collect ninety-five per cent of all their bills. It's business with them. If old Jake Rinehart calls them up by phone some nasty, rainy night, and old Jake is slow pay, why... Well, business is business, you know.

There are no more country doctors. Do you know why? You remember how Uncle Doc fussed with the hydraulic ram; you remember how interested he was in all kinds of farming implements that saved labor. They were clumsy things in his day, always breaking down and getting out of kilter, but they have been gradually improving until now their purpose is well-nigh accomplished. They have saved labor without a doubt. They have made the farmer's boy unnecessary, and have driven him to town. The "thrashers" who had such good appetites, and whose coming was a sort of a festival, are no longer the friends and neighbors, but nomads from afar. You remember the old time country school house, chock-a-block with young ones. It is empty as a dried gourd nowadays. I passed by one, in a once thickly settled neighborhood. School had just let out. Five children walked along the road with the teacher.—Success Magazine.

The sunken hulks of the Japanese battleships Yashima and the Russian warship Sebastopol, which went down in an engagement during the recent war, have been found by a Japanese salvage vessel, according to advices received from Japan. The ministry of marine is now trying to learn whether the hulks can be raised. The salvage vessel has also located the spot where the Japanese cruiser Takasago sank and is looking for the hulk of the battleship Hatsuzo.

MILLS ADDITION LOTS are Advancing in Value

When blocks in Mills Addition were offered at bargain prices a number of shrewd investors bought; since that time values have increased materially.

These Lots are Bargain Buys at present prices, and there is every reason to anticipate an advance in prices. Remember these lots are FIFTY feet in width and ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY FEET deep—more than double the area of most town lots offered to investors.
