The wind and freezing has killed considerable grain in the vicinity of Gale.

The Forestry Building at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition is somewhat similar to a Greek temple, done in the rustic with fir logs from five to six feet in diameter and from forty to fifty feet in length for the pillars.

E. W. McConnell, experienced show man, who is building the "Monitor and Merrimac" attraction at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle, says that the exhibition will be the most beautiful in history.

At close range the huge logs forming the colonnade for the Forestry Building at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition resemble a forest of gigantic trees.

SELLING CLOTHING.

Old Time Ways and Those of the Present Day—Traveling Model.

Time was when the traveling salesman for a wholesale manufacturer of men's clothing carried with him on the road as many as fifteen or twenty trunks containing made up samples. In those days he took along with him an expert packer from the factory to unpack the trunks when they hit a town and to pack them in readiness for the next jump.

The present day traveler for a wholesale manufacturer of men's high grade clothing carries with him just two sample trunks, one a wardrobe trunk and the other what is called a swatch trunk. In the wardrobe trunk he carries suspended on suitable hangers fifteen or twenty made up suits. Carried thus, these sample garments keep in good condition and show for what they are and to the best advantage.

In the swatch trunk the salesman carries samples of all the other fabrics that his concern is making up. Swatch is a trade name for a sample cloth 9 by 12 inches. Of swatches the salesman may carry hundreds, and he carries besides some scores of yards of cloth, an end being a long piece cut off the entire width of the cloth.

Of swatches and ends the salesman has a trunkful, and with fifteen or twenty made up suits to show styles and workmanship and these samples to show fabrics he can show goods to better advantage than from a well-stocked assortment of hundreds of made up suits.

Of course the man on the road with clothing does not in these circumstances require a packer, but the present day traveler for a concern making only high grade clothing does take with him a model on whom to exhibit clothes for the better display of the made up sample garments he carries and to show just how they will wear.

What is considered the standard model in the clothing trade is a man five feet eight inches in height, thirty-six inches chest measure and thirty-two inches waist. He must of course be well built and otherwise of correct proportions. If a model five feet nine inches in height were required he would need to be thirty-seven inches chest measure and thirty-three waist.

The model must be young or comparatively young. He does not need to be handsome, but he must be of good bearing, of intelligence and of good sense.

If the salesman is an able man and the model himself is a man with ability in him, then by observation and experience the model absorbs and develops the art of salesmanship, and he may become a salesman himself and come to have a model to try on clothing for him.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

What They Did to Him.

"Why did Napoleon take the English?" once asked an instructor in his story in a public school of Cincinnati, to which question no immediate reply was offered by any pupil.

"I'm sure somebody knows," said the teacher hopefully, scanning the faces before her.

"I think I can tell, mum," finally ventured a dirty faced lad in the rear of the room. "He hated the English because they made him live on the island by himself on the rock of St. Helena."

So Gallant.

"You know," said the fair patient, "when I met you at the show last summer it never occurred to me that you were a doctor of medicine."

"No?" replied the young physician.

"And when did you find it out?"

"Not until papa called you in to attend me."

"Ah!" But then I became a doctor of divinity"—Catholic Standard and Times.

Strawberry Shortcake.

Down of down on hills of dream—
Beat it up and out of cream
Break it down from valleys of sweet—
Take the sugar home who's who!
Lay it on a saucer of acid
In between them, crackled or melted,
Here's a tip on the way that run
To the redness of the sun
Glad you'll always be light,
Cross your hands and take a bite.

The Egyptian Mummy.

Egyptologists have discovered that among the ancient Egyptians the immediate preservation of the body was deemed absolutely essential to the corporeal reconstruction of the dead. According to the teaching of the Egyptian priests, the living man consisted of a body, a soul, an intelligence and an apportioned life called "Ka." Death separated these four parts, which must ultimately be reunited for all eternity. Between death on earth and life everlasting there intervened a period of several thousand years, during which
