They Won the Post.
It was certainly reproachable, though one cannot but smile at the bold trick played one night by half a dozen men in Paris. The Englishman, standing at the door of a private house, and before the servant could announce their arrival the leader had donned an official scarf and introduced himself as a police commissioner, seized about $1,000 which was lying on the table as stakes in a game of poker, saying he would not trouble the host and his guests to call at the office that evening, but would be called if they would do so the next morning. The "commissioner," with his escort, politely departed. When the players dutifully called at the office the next day, their visit created little surprise, and they learned, to their disgust, that this police commissioner of the night before had tricked them and their $1,000 had been carried off by a gang of thieves. So much for playing poker and having an uneasy conscience.—Boston Herald.

An Easy Ward.
This is what happened to a Glasgow workman when he tried to make a wife's home life happy by reading a police news to her as contained in an evening paper. In due course he reached an interesting trial for a month, the report of which concluded as follows:
"This case was held over until tomorrow, as the presiding magistrate said he found considerable difficulty in pronouncing sentence."
"Dear me," commented the reader's wife, "the census has been a man of much education, surely, or he would have found any difficulty in pronouncing an easy word like that."—Dundee Advertiser.

A Bit of Advice.
This is a bit of advice offered by the Gunston Gazette:
Young man, if you should come across a girl who, with a face as radiant as a sunflower, says as you appear at the door, "I will be busy for half an hour yet, for the dishes are not washed," just squat right down on the doorstep and wait for her, because some other chap may come along and secure the prize and right there you will have lost an angel.

He Kept His Job.
Heffords frequently receive condescension money. On one of the big ends of the middle west a conductor who had been in the employment of the ex-company for years was in the habit of "knocking down" fares. The fare over his route was about $3. Money was generally scarce among the students, and when they wished to go to the larger city they were in the habit of taking a silver dollar, placing it under a card of any kind and handing it to the agent conductor when he came to take up the tickets. He used to slip the dollar into the palm of his hand, punch the card, and the students saved $2 a trip, the conductor pocketing the extra dollar. In October, 1904, the officials of the road were astounded to get, together with his resignation, a full confession of his guilt in the form of a check for $21,000, the sum he had stolen in twenty years. Every one thought the road would prosecute the old man but it didn't. The officials were so flustered that instead of delecting him they raised his salary.—St. Louis Republic.

PATRICK HENRY.
A Saint in Religious Matters, but Different in Politics.

The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography has a number of letters by Roger Atkinson, a Virginia planter, who came from Cumberland, England, about 1723 and settled near Petersburg. To his brother-in-law, Samuel Pleasant of Philadelphia, he writes in October, 1774, concerning Virginia's recently appointed seven delegates to the first Philadelphia congress. The spirit of the man is shrewd, but distinctly non-reverential.

"The old gentleman, Col. Washington, was a real soldier—a warrior, a distinguished himself in early life before the death of your unfortunate but brave grandfather. He is a modest man, an amiable & speaks little in a motion such as a Bishop at his prayer."

"The old man's real half Quaker, Patrick Henry, yes. Brother's non-moderate & mild & in religious matter a saint but so very noisy. Patrick is a son of Thunder, Bonaparte is the Patriotic Farmer who explains this—I know it is above your doubts. He will shake his Senate & those years ago had like to have done treason in your House. In these times a very stern & steady in his country's cause & at ye same time such a fool that I verily believe I would give even a King to buy him out—look a second Shilpoo—oh, that he had the hairpins of some of our Court-iers for instance, was it North or South—South English or Welsh the poor Irish have enough of it in their own country, our Patrick would certainly be very unchristian to no Macaroni."

FLOATING IN THE AIR.
The Impression on Ascending in a Free Balloon.

One of the first questions which I am usually asked by persons seeking information about balloons is "What is the sensation of going up in a balloon?" writes Captain C. G. Chesler, U. S. A. I will attempt to give in a few lines some of the sensations which I describe. It would be like trying to describe standing still as a sensation. The impression on ascending in a free balloon is more an optical illusion. The ascent is so slow and gentle that it cannot be felt, and one has the impression that the balloon is motionless and the earth gradually dropping away. All the noises and sounds of the people below become fainter and die out. As the altitude increases hills and valleys are not perceived, and the earth seems flat, like a beautiful colored map, showing only colored spots, forests, etc.

The greater part of the time a balloon is moving either up or down, but the motion is not apparent, and it requires a strong purpose to indicate whether the balloon is ascending or descending. If a considerable change of altitude is made in a short time, the difference in air pressure may be felt on the ear drums. In descending even quite rapidly I have never had any sensation of falling.—Journal of Military Service.

VALUE OF A Y. M. C. A.
For a Wonderful Change Came Over Some Towns.

The energies of the boys in eleven towns in Essex county, Mass., instead of being expended in bootlegging, are being turned to some good purpose through the headings of the county Y. M. C. A. Gangs of lads that used to last evening the churches during service, singing and disturbing the meetings, now decrease the church, meet at the services, form the largest classes in the Sunday school and make life enjoyable for every fellow who lifts the hand against the sanctity, and what has not been found before for a generation, the older boys are teaching in the Sunday schools. It was in Essex county that eight different teachers in nine months, in attempting to govern a school, had been driven out by the rowdy element. After a Bible class was started by the Y. M. C. A. a new order went into effect, and a teacher has been kept for two years. This called out from the school committee a vote of thanks to the county association's management.

In another town where fifty boys were got together first for sports, then for Bible study, then for good works for the town, two churches which had been antagonistic for fifty years were brought together into one. The abandoned edifice had been given by George Peabody, the philanthropist, and the church was organized by a brother of Henry Ward Beecher.

When the selectmen voted $10 to repair old supports in another town the boys undertook for the money to put up new ones, scientifically and in cement and designed on artistic lines. More than 200 high school boys are studying "Life Questions of High School Boys," a course by Professor Jenks of Cornell. Now the teachers say the moral tone of the schools has changed. A movement is on foot for the county association men to cooperate with the school superintendents to secure playgrounds and organize the play life of the towns of the county.

BOLIVIAN INDIANS.
The Majority Are Semi-intoxicated From the Cradle to the Grave.

The Indian women of Bolivia are usually superior to their lords in actual intelligence; also in age, as a rule. They earn the larger share of their mutual "living" and take the lead in most things.

As recognized head of the house the Bolivian Indian wife is much more likely to thrash her comparatively timid spouse than he is to use her.

In the markets, when produce has to be disposed of, she can drive a far better bargain than he could; she can carry as heavy burdens, endure as much privation and physical toil, labor, chew as much coca and drink as much strong drink.

Little or no money passes among the Bolivian Indians, their means of exchange being whatever they may raise or the labor of their hands. They will eat when not hungry, drink when not thirsty, sleep when not sleepy, anywhere and any time when opportunity offers, "against the time of need," as they say. The majority are in a state of semi-intoxication from babyhood to the grave, alcohol being used on every pretext, freely as their means will allow, on occasions of births, deaths and feast days—the last named being remarkably frequent.—Boston Globe.

HIS COAT OF ARMS.
It Was Fairly Earned Since He Descended From a King.

A man applied to the college of her ality for a coat of arms, says a writer in the Cornhill Magazine, and was asked if any of his ancestors had been renowned for any singular achievements. The man paused and considered, but could recollect nothing.

"Your father," said the herald, adding his memory, "your grandfather, your great-grandfather?"

"No," returned the applicant; "I never knew that I had a great-grandfather or a grandfather."

"Of yourself?" asked this creator of dignity.

"I know nothing remarkable of myself," returned the man, "only that, being once locked up in Ludgate prison for debt, I found means to escape from an upper window, and that, you know, is no honor in a man's escutcheon."

"And how did you get down?" said the herald.

"Odd enough," returned the man, "I procured a cord, fixed it round the neck of the statue of King Lud on the outside of the building and thus let myself down."

"I have it!" said the herald. "No honor! Lineally descended from King Lud! And his coat of arms will do for you."
