KLAMATH FALLS, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1909.

PRESIDENT KEHR TALAN

Netherlands is more than thirty-four bushels per acre against fourteen bushels in the United States; of oats, fifty-three bushels against twenty-three in the United States; potatoes, 222 bushels against 95 in the United States (a difference of over $60 an acre). Not only this, but the average yield of wheat on the best lands of the Northwest has fallen from twenty-five to less than twelve bushels per acre.

"These facts are given as an indication of what has been accomplished in the past by applying proper methods, and of the requirements of the future if we are to have a permanent, successful agriculture. That the farmer of the future may succeed, he must follow modern, scientific methods. He must secure the maximum product of the best quality at the minimum cost of time and money. This is possible only through special education. What is true of the farmers and fruit growers is equally true of those who are engaged in other industries. The complexity of modern civilization makes it imperative that those who succeed receive special training for the vocations which they are to follow. But where are these people to receive such education? Not in the colleges and universities, because more than ninety-eight per cent never reach these institutions. And yet, the special advantages of education have heretofore been confined almost entirely to the work of college and university grade.

"Therefore, notwithstanding the great achievements that have been wrought by our colleges and universities, and the potency of these institutions as agencies in national development, and with full recognition of the unmeasured value of the work accomplished by the elementary and secondary schools in training for general citizenship, it must be apparent that as a system our schools are not meeting present demands, particularly along the lines of industry. The work of the common schools has been a preparation for high school, for college. The entire structure has been reared upon the ideal of the old type college, the purpose of which was to train for the professions. But conditions have changed, and the people are insisting upon equality of educational opportunity. In the field of higher education this has been secured through the agricultural and mechanical colleges. These institutions, in fact, were established as a revolt against the old type college. They meet the requirements for technical or industrial work of college grade; but, at best, they can do little more than train the leaders required in the fields of industrial education and of industrial development. Besides, as already stated, more than ninety-eight per cent of the people are never able to reach the higher institutions; ninety-five per cent never get beyond the common schools, and of these, under present conditions, a large proportion withdraw before reaching the eighth grade. Furthermore, upwards of ninety-two per cent of the people of the United States are engaged in industrial pursuits. Hence, if these people ever receive any school training relating directly to their life work it must be in the common schools. These schools are maintained by all the people; and as a matter of right and justice, as well as of national interest, the work of these schools should be redirected and so modified as to meet the needs of all the people who are trained in them. The great laboring classes—those who achieve results in the world's work—are entitled to as good educational preparation for their vocations as are those who aspire to the professions.

"The demand everywhere is for efficient service, for men and women who can do things—on the farm, in the forest, in the shop and mill and factory, in business, in the home—everywhere in the multifarious activities of life. To meet this demand industrial work must be introduced into the common and high schools, thereby bringing within the reach of all the people the special training required in the industries. This work should cover the broad field of production, manufacture and commerce. It should be in harmony with the environment of the people, and adapted to their needs, whether in agriculture, in business, in the handicrafts, or in the home.

"In this connection too much importance cannot be attached to the necessity of providing special education for women. There is no truer statement than that the prosperity and civilization of a country depend upon the character of its homes, and the modern home requires special training in the sciences and arts relating to home life. It is as important that the future wives and mothers of the nation receive special training in preparation for their life work as it is that men be trained for the vocations which they are to follow.

"One of the most remarkable things revealed by the study of educational history is the reluctance and tardiness with which the advantages of school work have been extended to women. Not until during recent decades have the colleges and universities, even in this country, admitted women on the same equality with men; and, even then, except in rare instances, the courses of study were planned for men. Until courses in domestic science and art were developed in the agricultural and mechanical colleges, the significance of what

The Official Paper of Klamath County

THE REPUBLICAN

The Best Weekly in the Best Town in the Best County in the Best State

$2.00 per year

IN ADVANCE

What would you say if some man living in Klamath Falls made it his business to drive out to your place, no matter what part of the county you are living in, and spent several hours telling you all the news? And what else would you think if he said he would be glad to come out the following week and do the same thing again, and promised to come every week in the year? Wouldn't you inquire as to his mental condition? Well, I guess you would want to know what business he was engaged in that he had so much spare time for disseminating news, or had some ultimate object in cultivating your acquaintance.

We'll bring the news. Well, here's the point: The editor of the Weekly Republican has a better proposition to make you than the man who peddles news from house to house. It is not worth your while to ask what our business is; it's to peddle news, and peddle it in the best manner and shape possible. It is an impossibility to propose to make a personal visit to do this news-telling act; we simply concentrate our time and save buggy wear and horse feed (your horse feed) by staying right in Klamath Falls and gathering every bit of news that's going and printing it in The Republican. We are not a nephew of Uncle Sam, and consequently we have to pay the postage to send the paper to you, but even then that's easier than to get out to your place and hand you the paper personally.

Oh, yes; you may as well know, too, that we have an axe to grind by coming out to see you every week in the year. Mother says father came to see her twice a week for four years before she found out what he was coming for, but The Republican will make you understand in less time than that. You will get to know all the news of the county, and lots of things besides—things that go to make you as snappy and up-to-date as any other man in the township, or county, either; you won't get wise to things that occurred three months ago—you'll know them the week they happen. If you don't it's your own fault. Tie a string on your little finger when you start to the Falls next time and subscribe for The Weekly Republican to come and tell you the news every week in the year.

Watch the Ads, Too. Read the ads—all of them. Look them over each week as carefully as you do the news matter. It costs the merchants good hard-earned money to put those ads in the paper, and they mean them to be read. If you miss getting the full worth of your subscription money it's because you fail to read The Republican ads. You know where to trade when you come to the city; or at least you can't blame it all onto your wife if you make bad bargains.

Helping the Town . . .

By banking your money in a bank in your own community you increase the community's power to do business. If substantial farmers want to borrow money there is more to loan them. If you bank your money away from home it is loaned to other farmers, merchants and manufacturers. Help your home people. Money hidden at home helps no one. L'aved in a bank it is put to work in ways that help all.

The First National Bank of Klamath Falls

A Savings Account . . .

In a rainy day fund, a life insurance policy, a sick benefit, a funeral benefit, and an old age pension. There is no furniture closer to the pocket, and it is under the owner's control at all times. It will tide him over sickness; it will care for his family when he must go; it will see him through old age, and bury him when he dies. It is a simple business proposition. Begin early, and keep it up, and the money in the bank will multiply him as he journeys.
