Chinese Laws.

In lemon colored silk a Chinese diplomat talked about Chinese laws. "Some of our laws, you know, are very stimulating," he said. "For example, Chi owed money to a money lender. Chi would not pay, and the money lender hanged himself on Chi's doorstep. Chi was condemned to death. You see, he was really responsible for the money lender's death. "A son able to support his parents is imprisoned for life if he won't do so. A son unable to support them is imprisoned for three years, as we hold—and quite rightly—that there must be something wrong with a young man who can't support his parents. "Our police are excellent. Thanks to the stimulus of our law. When a crime is committed a sleuth is put upon the case and given, say, thirty days to land the criminal. If the sleuth fails he himself pays the penalty of the crime, less two degrees. That, too, is a just and stimulating law, for if the police can neither prevent nor punish crime then they should be themselves punished for their rank incapacity."—New York Press.

Supernatural Remedies.

For whooping cough a cooked dormouse is good. In the eighteenth century this remedy was employed in Scotland. Here is another medicine for the same complaint: "Watercress is a very good thing, sir, with a little bit of that brown sugar what you use to put on to bacon and some honey mixed with it. And I'll tell you what's a good thing for cramp but a rusty bacon fat fried down and afore it resolves add some pepper and vinegar. It opens the pipes of the lungs, d'ye see." And if you are adventurous you may try this for "phlegm on to the chest." Catch a "dear little dotty frog" and tie a bit of string to one of its back legs. Then you keep on letting it go down your throat and pulling it up again. The narrator of this added to T. W. Thompson, who sets down these stories: "It's the truth, young fellow, and it cleared the phlegm out of his throat bootiful, but we wouldn't do such a thing as that."—London Chronicle.

Boomerang Kinks.

There are a good many "kinks" to be learned to throw the boomerang skillfully. One is always to throw against the wind if you want it to come back to you. It is a miniature aeroplane, for it literally sails against the wind and is borne upward and outward by the breeze. If the player wants to make a long distance straightaway record he can throw with the wind, but he must take care to select a boomerang which is heavy so affected that it will not be too much affected by the air currents. By pointing the boomerang at a certain angle he can make it soar aloft in circles like a hawk until it may be as high as 100 feet above the earth. As in golf play, it is not so much mere strength that makes a long thrower, but the skill in aiming, the direction and the boomerang throwing the way in which advantage may be taken of the air currents.—St. Nicholas.

"Yes," said the Billville story teller. "The cyclone carried his house into the next county and set it down there as comfortable as you please, and as he stepped out of the door to survey the country the man who owned the land notified him of suit for trespass and the tax collector handed him a bill for taxes."—Atlantic Constitution.

Sawing Rails is Not Musical.

Rails are cut with saws—not quietly; not at all. There is considerable racket underneath an elevated railroad in a narrow street, the subway isn't quite a lodge in some vast wilderness, but never until I watched a toothless saw cut through a cold steel rail by friction, melting its way—you can see the smoldered ends afterward—did I experience a noise that my ear felt rather than heard, says Eugene Wood in Success Magazine. The toothless saw whirled with unimaginable speed, the sparks showered like an enormous plowheel, and the unwilling steel emitted a shriek of agony that was like a forceful finger jammed into my ear and scratching on my eardrum with its nail. It was like a brass band of a hundred pieces, each piece blowing fortissimo, a note a half tone higher than its fellow. I don't care for such "close harmony."

The Value of His Time.

Young physicians in the smaller towns have an idea that appearing very busy will help them greatly in starting a practice. The following was told by an ex-senator, Dr. Godfrey Hunter of Kentucky. Dr. Hunter had a call the afternoon following the hanging out of his "shingle" and started through town in his buggy at terrific speed. A policeman stopped the enterprising physician. "Doctor," he said, "it is against the city ordinance to drive at the speed you are going. You must accompany me to the judge and pay your fine." "What is the fine?" inquired the doctor. "Five dollars." "The doctor's hand flew to his pocket. "Here's $10. I have to come back just as fast as I am going."—Success Magazine.

Fixed Stars.

There are no fixed stars. When we look up at the stars they appear to be very still and peaceful, but astronomers know that such is not the case, but that each one is moving, some with incredible speed, invisible to the unaided eye, yet visible to the instruments at their disposal. Our sun, for instance, which is nothing more or less than one of the "stars" supposed to be "fixed," is moving along, with the entire solar system, toward a point in the constellation Hercules. In nature, from the most insignificant germ to the largest world, everything is in perpetual motion.

The Maid's Cheek.

"Do you ever lose that umbrella of yours?" asked the maid. "No; I don't," replied the man sternly. "The person who takes that umbrella will have to take me." "Do I understand that to be a proposal of marriage or a threat?" inquired the miss sweetly.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Woman Question.

Little Willie—Say, paw, what is the "woman question?" Pa—It's numerous, my son. For example: What shall I wear? How does my hair look in the back? Is my hat on straight? etc.—Exchange.

Up and Down.

Algernon Arduppe—Can't you make me any better rate for room and board than what you advertise—$5 up? Mrs. Hammond—Yes. In your case it will be $5 down.—Chicago Union.

Knowledge is good that he has earned as much. Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.—Casper.

A Parrot.

Most persons believe Stevenson's verses for children may, without correction or amendment, safely be placed in the hands of the impressionable youngster without corrupting either his morals or his English. But there are some who think otherwise, says an exchange.

Little Alice's mother, having taught the child to say, "Time to rise," in which "the birdie with a yellow bill" figures, the child announced that she meant to recite it to her teacher.

"Well, and what did Miss Prim say to 'the birdie with a yellow bill?'" asked Alice's mother when the little girl returned from school.

"She says it is quite a pretty thought. But this is the way she makes me say it now, mamma:

"A birdie with a yellow bill hopped upon the window sill. Cooped his shining eyes and said, 'Are you not ashamed, you sleepyhead?'"

"But that was not the way the birdie said it, Alice," the mother remonstrated.

"No, mamma; I know. But teacher says it isn't good English to say, 'Ain't you 'shamed, you sleepyhead?'"

Sixteenth Century Meals.

Judging from a passage in Harrison's "Description of Britain," breakfast eating in the sixteenth century was held to denote efficiency. "Heretofore," he writes, "there hath been more time spent in eating and drinking than commonly is in these days; for, whereas of old we had breakfast in the forenoon, beverages or nuntion after dinner and thereto rears suppers when it was time to go to rest, now these old repasts, thanked be Gods, are verie well left, and each one (except here and there some young hungry stomach that cannot fast till dinner time) contenteth himself with dinner and supper only. . . . The noble, gentle and students ordinarily go to dinner at 11 before noon and to supper at 5 or between 5 and 6 at afternoon. The merchants dine and sup seldom before 12 at noon and 6 at night, especially in London. The husbandmen dine also at high noon and sup at 7 or 8, but out of the farms in our universities the scholars dine at 10."

A Curious Trail.

All sorts of devices have been used to surrk a line of march. A unique method of "blazing the trail" is still to be seen in Africa, and a recent publication prints a picture of one of these memorials of the dervish raid. Arthur J. Hayes mentions the subject in his "Source of the Nile Nile."

In 1890, after a fierce battle with the Abyssinians, the dervishes pursued their foes as far as the lake district. The mahdi's men had small knowledge of geography and little topographical intelligence. So the advance party, in order to mark the route for those who came after and also to guide the force on their return journey, twisted the saplings along the way into living knots. The war ended, but the tied up trees grew and flourished but uncouthly twisted and distorted, and are now the only reminders of that uprising of the dervishes.

Where Nature Cooks the Food.

In certain parts of New Zealand both native and white women use the natural hot springs to do their cooking. In the Hotorua region, it matters not whether the cook wishes to roast a piece of meat, boil potatoes or steam pudding, all she has to do is to step out of doors and place the cooking utensil in a steam hole. The cover is then put on, and a piece of coarse sack over the whole completes the operation. In a short time dinner is ready. At Whakarewara the entire earth just beneath the surface is a mass of boiling springs. Millions of gallons of hot water hiss and steam, sending vapors skyward in great white clouds. Strike the ground almost anywhere with a stick and the hole thus formed fills with hot water. Hot water for baths, the wet's washing-and for the ordinary purposes of the household is always on hand.

Hard on the Chairs.

Among the ancestors of Wendell Phillips were several Puritan clergymen. Perhaps it was a push of heredity which made him at five years of age a preacher.

His congregation was composed of circles of chairs arranged in his father's parlor, while a taller chair, with a Bible on it, served him for a pulpit. He would harangue these wooden auditors by the hour.

"Wendell," said his father to him one day, "don't you get tired of this?" "No, papa," wittily replied the boy preacher, "I don't get tired, but it is rather hard on the chairs."

Obedyed Him.

"Where's old Four Fingered Pete?" asked Alkali Ike. "I ain't seen him around since I got back." "Pete?" said the bartender. "Oh, he went up to Hyeusa Tongue and got jagged. Went up to a hotel winder, stuck his head in and hollered 'Fire!' an' everybody did."—Everybody's Magazine.

Painful Cleanliness.

From a Vienna paper: "Comfortable pension for English visitors; good kitchen with continental entables, or plain roshoeef with potatoes for same price; nice sleeping rooms with open windows; painful cleanliness; numerous extraordinary references."—St. James' Gazette.

The Proof Later.

Myrtle—Papa doesn't favor your calling here at all, George. George—Why, that can't be! Your father gave me a cigar a moment since as I came in the door. Myrtle—All right; just wait till you smoke it.—Lippincott's.

Small trees fell great trees.—German proverb.

Mistake in the Bill.

A gentleman, says Modern Women, who recently returned from a tour in Spain tells this story:

I left Seville on foot after a stay of a week and was twenty miles away when I was overtaken by the landlord of the hotel in which I had stayed. The innkeeper rode beside me for nearly an hour before he found courage to make known his business.

"F the senior and God please," he began apologetically. "I made a mistake in his bill yesterday."

"How?" I inquired.

"I forgot to make a charge for his candles to light him to bed."

"But it was moonlight, and I had no candles."

"Then, senior, with the help of God, I forgot to charge you with the moonlight."

The charge amounted to 2 cents in American money, and he had hired an ass and ridden twenty miles to collect it. I was amused and astonished. Then I accused him of being a robber and offered him a cent to settle the bill. He worked up a beautiful smile and held out his hand.

"I will take it, with thanks, senior," he said. "God will bless you for an honest man!"

First Mortgage Bonds.

By reason of the insistence of many investors that their bonds be of "first" mortgage it may be said that the importance of the word "first" is dependent upon the circumstances, says Moody's Magazine. A bond may be first in fact. It may be so only in a relative sense in that it indicates the order in which the bond was put out by the issuing company or the use of the term "first" in the name of a bond, undesirable and loose though it be in such instances, may be upon the slight ground that the mortgage is indeed first on some part of the property, while on other parts it may have but a third or fourth claim. It is therefore obvious that the mere presence of this term in a title does not necessarily make the bond in absolutely prior lien. It has been estimated that 35 per cent in value of steam railroad "firsts" are first liens in name only.

The First Sleeping Car.

The first real sleeping car was built in 1864. It was called the Pioneer, and the builder further designated it by the letter "A," not dreaming that he would soon exhaust the letters of the alphabet. The Pioneer was built in a Chicago and Alton shop and cost the almost fabulous sum of $18,000. That was reckless extravagance in a year when the best of railroad coaches could be built at a cost not exceeding $4,500. But the Pioneer was blazing a new path in luxury. Without it was radiant in paint and varnish, in gay stripes and lettering. It was a giant compared with its fellows, for it was a foot wider and two and a half higher than any car ever built before. It had the hinged berths that are the distinctive feature of the American sleeping car today, and the porter and the passengers no longer had to drag the bedding from closets at the far end of the car.—Outing.

Cape of Good Hope.

In 1487 Bartholomew Diaz sailed far enough south along the western coast of Africa not only to describe but to double the Cape of Storms, as it was then called, and as the coast was as certain to run toward the northeast the prospect of success in the direction of India seemed now so clear that the Portuguese monarch renamed the cape "Cabo de Boa Esperanza," or Cape of Good Hope. The "good hope" was realized in 1498 by Vasco da Gama, who, doubling the southernmost point of Africa, sailed on to Calicut, thus opening up the long dreamed of route to India.

He Wasn't Glad.

Steve Long is noted for attending to his own business and saying very little about it. One morning an inquisitive neighbor met him returning from the woods with his gun over his shoulder. "Hello, Steve! Where've you been—a-shootin'?" "Yep." "What've you been a-shootin'?" "Dog." "Dog? My! Was he mad?" "Waal, he didn't look so danged well pleased."—Everybody's Magazine.

The Blind Leading the Blind.

Neither Mabel nor Willie has quite mastered the intricacies of English pronunciation, but each delights in correcting the other's mistakes. Last Sunday, while the family was at dinner, Mabel said: "Please pass the dravy." Willie saw his chance and quickly exclaimed: "Well, Mabel! If I couldn't say dravy I'd say dressa."—Woman's Home Companion.

Pretty Ancient.

"Billinger has some very ancient airs in his new comic opera." "Ancient! Say, I'll bet he has gone back for some of them to the time when the morning stars sang together!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Double Job.

"Tell me—ah—are you a—er—ah—a good, careful, excellent cook and a—er—a very superior laundress?" "Ah-h-h! Wot d'ye take me for—twine?"—Harper's Weekly.

Inconsequent.

"Your pictures are inconsistent." "Why?" "You illustrate this bobo joke with a wash drawing."—Kansas City Times.

Winter ends out what summer lays up.—Anderson.
