WOMAN MOTHER FOR 90 BOYS

Not Content With This, Minneapolis House-keeper Is Willing to Take More

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 17.—Mother to 90 boys, and more wanted! That's what Mrs. Frank E. Cray of Minneapolis is. She's like the old lady who lived in a shoe, in Mother Goose, in the number of children she "mothers"—but Mrs. Cray DOES know what to do; and she's doing it so well that the real mothers of these 90 rollicking, happy youngsters have come to realize that when their sons grow to manhood they will have 90 as near perfect husbands as 90 women could wish for. Mrs. Cray is "house mother" to the boys of the Thomas Arnold public school.

Watching the boys on their way to school, with their lunch boxes under their sturdy arms, gave Mrs. Cray her idea. She thought how much tastier and more healthful a hot lunch would be for them. Then she formulated her plan and took it to the teachers and to members of the Board of Education. "Fine, the very thing; begin right away," was the comment of everyone she spoke to. Out of money the boys got through sale of their work at manual training classes they laid in a supply of provisions and Mrs. Cray cooked the lunches. Form that it was an easy and logical step to teaching the boys to do the cooking themselves. Now hot noon-day meals are cooked for the boys and the teachers. Sometimes the main article is vegetable soup; sometimes it is a nourishing stew; always there is a dessert pudding to top off with, or baked apples.

Six boys, selected by themselves, are in charge of the cooking each week. They have come to be mighty proud of the culinary art, and there is quite a bit of friendly rivalry over the abilities of these cook-boys. The six who do the cooking also do the dish washing. Once a week the floor is scrubbed and the dish towels boiled. The boys take their regular turns doing this work. They have come to realize the value of a good housekeeper and they are putting their knowledge into practice in their homes, much to the delight of their mothers and sisters.

"Mothering has always been my specialty," said Mrs. Cray today. She has four boys of her own. "My 90 boys learned quickly, and they will remember what they have learned. Some of my boys were a little slack in table manners and cleanliness. Some of them preferred to sit down at table without 'cleaning up.' This is all changed now. There is as much rivalry in table manners and cleanliness now as there is over the abilities of each as a cook. They all call me 'mother,' and I try to live up to the name. Now that we have grown dear to each other, they come to me on Saturdays and after school is out. They give me their confidences and I advise them frequently. Many times, when difficulties arise, they make me their judge, sometimes it is hard to decide a case and settle it absolutely on its merits, but there has never been an appeal."

Of course there are times when the boys are not angels. On such occasions Mrs. Cray goes on the theory that "putting your arms around a boy and loving him does more good than a whipping." Next summer Mrs. Cray will teach the boys gardening. She is chairman of the Minneapolis Improvement League. The Board of Education is so pleased with "Mother Cray's" work with her 90 boys that they are considering supplying a new range and new kitchen utensils for her kitchen.

acknowledging responsibility to any one else; third, the man who makes it his business to care for himself and also to consider the welfare of others. The man who failed, or lost his talent, has in his the elements of the first two classes. He looked at his Lord and thought him a hard man. His fellows seemed favored above himself. He was suspicious. Therefore he resolved to take care of himself and himself alone. So he buried his possibilities of success. He was narrow and selfish in both facts. Of course he lost out. Any man who buries his own possibilities must necessarily lose. He was unprofitable to life as a whole, because he chose to be. He was afraid he would earn more than he was paid. He was afraid he might work after the whistle blew. Self was the biggest thing in his eye. He was afraid, afraid he might humble himself, in order to be great. Success was never any where this man's watchword. He was a negative. He looked back, not ahead. He looked down, not up. He chose to be unfit for the responsibility of one talent. Who ever would think of giving him five, or ten, or eleven. Choosing wrongly in the small things he never would have chosen rightly in the great things. He crucified himself.

3. The Profitable Servant.
 The unprofitable servant was an accumulator. He gathered to himself and buried it. The profitable servant was a producer. By his personal efforts he added to the sum total of the riches of heaven, the estate. All the efforts of the first were put forth in suspicions, jealousies and grave digging. All the efforts of the other were directed toward production. He was so interested in that that he forgot jealousies, favors and the possibility of overwork. No graves for him. He needs them not. His talents are in circulation. He wins.

The talents of the profitable servant were not necessarily riches of gold. They were not necessarily high honors. He may have been a ditch digger. Possibly he was a machinist, or a farmer, or a preacher. He may have been a banker, or a teacher, or a lawyer. Nobody knows, and nobody ought to care, for it is not the point. The point is that he had good talents and he used them. He used them for all he was worth. . . . They may have been talents of kindness, or of hand work, or of brain work, or of cheer, or song, or hatred of wickedness, or just love. Possibly they were all of these. But they never rusted in his hands. He never thought God made the earth for a grave. He thought it was made as a basis for production. He thought the same thing about the human soul.

Isn't your business going well? Make it go. Is your church lagging? Better open that grave and take out the talent. Have your friendships fallen off? Somebody must make an effort to get them back. It may as well be you as any one else. Make your soul produce. A plow beats a spade any day. The alkali of jealousy, hate, envy, is bad for the soil. It needs rinsing out. The lime of the Spirit ought to be put in. It will sweeten things up wonderfully. Heaven will be better to you, and hell will be better without you. Now, isn't that so? Cheer up. Dig up the talent; fill up the grave; and throw the spade away.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

"Judgment Gifts"
 By E. C. RICHARDS, Pastor Grace Methodist Episcopal Church

Judgment Gifts
 "Unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance; but unto him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." Matthew 25:29.

1. Judgment After Testing.
 To some this text seems unfair, and in reading it they have questioned the fairness of God. To give to him that already bath, while taking away the little that the other man may have received, seems crass, under modern views of the rights of men. And it is so, if viewed as a judgment of life or effort. Foreordained failure looks unjust, to the modern mind, and it undoubtedly is. To take away a man's lone talent, all that he has, and give to him that has, looks unfair.

But a judgment at the beginning of life is just what this text is not. Unfair taking away and unfair reward are the last things thought of. It was never meant as a judgment at the beginning of things. It is distinctly stated as a likeness of the kingdom of heaven, and heaven means blessedness. It is a part of the gospel and the gospel means good tidings. All this taking away and giving to those that have in abundance, in the actual kingdom, is a resultant of testing. The man who fails in responsibility loses. The man who stands the test receives.

Still it looks unfair, for perhaps he was not able to meet the requirements. Probably he did not have the ability. But this is just what he did have. To every man was given according to his several ability. His talent equalled his ability to fulfill the responsibility of that talent. He that failed, failed because he chose to defy natural law. He that won did so because he chose to follow natural law. None of these men was judged until he had met natural law with his talent. The judgment came at the end of the time of test. It was based entirely on capacity and choice. And this is a picture of the kingdom of heaven.

2. The Unprofitable Servant.
 Responsibility to some requirement is the backbone of this parable. Also, it is the backbone of life. It is the man who refuses to be responsible to any thing or any body or any law—it is he who becomes driftwood. This text makes allowance for all oppression, temptation, forced failures, so-called, and all the things over which we have no control. It does not state them, but it takes account of them, for it says that the thing given and brought out at the end in judgment was the thing which he might have doubled, in spite of oppression, temptation and wrong. It was the burden which he might have carried through, but for one thing: his own suspicion and selfishness.

Washington Gladden reviews three classes of men: he who neglects his own business or work and busies himself with that of others, when the business of others is not injurious to society. Society repudiates such as a useless busybody; second, he who prides himself upon caring for himself and his own alone without

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

TAKE A GLASS OF SALTS TO FLUSH OUT YOUR KIDNEYS AND NEUTRALIZE IRRITATING ACIDS.

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast; continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normally again.

Jad salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which quickly relieves bladder trouble. (Paid Advertisement)
