OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

United Press Service
BOSTON, Jan. 17.—Shades of Eve! In the very teeth of the bitter criticism of the peek-a-boo waist, the diaphanous and slit skirt, and the sometimes more than half-back decolette, comes a mere man timorous enough to declare that women wear too many clothes. Professor Charles Zugblin, famous scientist and lecturer of Worcester, contends that the human race would be healthier, happier and more moral if women wore fewer clothes.

"The best garment for each sex," said Professor Zugblin today, "is a one-piece pair of rompers. If custom inexorably dictates the addition of skirts for growing young girls, they can still wear bloomers.

"The elimination of skirts is obviously in process now. Petticoats have been abandoned, temporarily, at least, and the slit skirt gives promise of a skirtless costume in the future.

"And the savings on skirt material and petticoats makes expensive silk stockings available for a multitude of women. What economic possibilities the skirtless costume holds.

"Instead of being immoral, the slit skirt is a token of woman's emancipation from sex subjection. If ultra-conservative people are shocked and ultra-vulgar people are ribald, it is because both prefer the subjection of women.

Incidentally the corset is losing its tyrannical hold with the result that women's figures, when fully clothed, more nearly resemble the normal figure. The present vogue of scant clothing, if it can be continued, will inevitably result in women having better figures because deceit is impossible in the diaphanous gowns.

The alleged danger to health by less clothing for the body will be abundantly cared for by superior circulation of the blood, better appetite and more normal sleep. Oxford ties, pumps and thin silk stockings on healthy women lead to such a circulation of blood that they may be warmer than in the past.

Decolette costumes, when not extreme, are appropriate in all but the severest weather if the wearers are in normal health. The justification of the present modes for women is shown in the sufferings endured by men who are subjected to the present imbecile masculine garments.

Poincare Retains His Popularity in France

PARIS, Jan. 17.—Un doubtedly the most popular man in France is President Raymond Poincare, who, today, one year ago, was elected by the Versailles Congress. Notwithstanding, it is an open secret that the president and his present cabinet are somewhat at odds.

When Poincare was elected a year ago he was considered the people's candidate. Old school politicians, among whom were Georges Clemenceau, Emile Combes, Dubois of the Senate, Deschanel of the Chamber, Eugene Caillaux and Alexander Ribot, opposed him, it is said, because it was known that he would not consent to the purely decorative part in the government. It is also stated that he would have been defeated had the rank and file in the Senate and Chamber dared oppose an avalanche of public opinion.

Poincare's first cabinet was headed by Aristide Briand. It is known that the views of the two men are almost identical. The second cabinet headed by Louis Barthou, changed matters a little. The third and last, headed by Gaston Doumergue, it is claimed, is dominated by the politicians who oppose Poincare, and, when Briand got up in the Chamber and criticized its policies, people remarked that it was almost as if the president himself was talking.
