

Coast Money Market Sound, Says Herbert Fleishhacker

President of San Francisco Bank, Who Spends Much Time Here, Says Conditions Are All Normal Again in U. S.

The following article in the San Francisco Bulletin, under the signature of Herbert Fleishhacker, president of the Anglo and Latin Paris National Bank, may be taken as authoritative:

There is not the slightest basis for worry over the financial situation here. Despite the fact that all Europe is at war, conditions on this side of the Atlantic have returned to normal with remarkable promptitude.

For a day or two after the outbreak of war there was a slight tendency to hysteria in the East. This was promptly checked by the combined activity of the New York financiers and the United States treasury department. Today the entire nation is resting on an even keel.

Financial conditions today on the coast are normal in every respect.

Shipping is hesitating temporarily for lack of bottoms; but the moment that England guarantees the carrying of our products this condition will be relieved and will return to normal.

The banks of this city were never more sound. There has been no sudden withdrawal from either the savings or commercial deposits. There is a greater quantity of gold and currency here now than ever before in the history of the city.

The tremendous balances which the San Francisco banks are carrying in Chicago are also available. Currency can be transmitted with absolute promptitude either through the sub-treasury or through the usual channels.

Immediately after the first sudden outbreak of war, tension was high at New York because of the attempt which Europe made to unload her securities on New York and secure American gold. Then came the prompt action of the New York stock exchange in closing, and immediately afterward that of the New York clearing house in refusing all shipments of gold to Europe.

As a further great relief to the situation came $200,000,000 of the Aldrich-Vreeland money from the national treasury to New York. Today conditions in New York are bordering upon the normal.

The government has a billion dollars available for the banks to aid the nation in the movement of crops. This sum will become available as soon as the federal reserve association is established. It is my expectation and belief, based on latest advice from New York, that Warburg and Delano will be confirmed not later than today or tomorrow, and that by the end of the week the board will be completely organized, and this will end all lingering uneasiness and place the entire nation in an absolutely sound condition.
