LET'S GET BUSY

WHAT has become of the Klamath County Scenic Attractions League

Last October about sixty Klamath Falls men journeyed to the scene of the war of '72

The result was the formation of the organization. This had for its purpose the making of a roadway into the Lava Beds

At the first meeting a second junket for the sixty or more was arranged. This was a trip to the summit of Stukel Mountain

The autumn waned, and winter held sway, to give way later to spring and summer

That the Modoc Lava Beds is a region that will awe everyone by its historic associations

Parties visiting the Lava Beds this summer are convinced that a few men with rakes, picks and shovels would have no difficulty in making a good road clear into the region of attractions

Why not get active NOW in the arrangement of this road and the placing of the monuments to guide travelers

Europe is at present shut to the tourist on account of the war, and even for years after the war it will be uninviting to those who go to see the highest works of man in the arts and sciences

To what section will the tourist turn? To the one that offers the most interesting scenery, especially the rugged, natural kind, that can be found only in the West

"Seeing America," and the Panama-Pacific exposition will draw thousands of tourists to the Pacific Coast next year

"Castoffs" Made Boston Braves National League Pennant Winners

If the credit for making the Braves of Boston the pennant winners in the National League is to go to George Stallings, their manager, there is no more striking proof of his ability than the fact that his club is largely made up of "castoffs" from other major league clubs

First and foremost was Johnny Evers, who was not good enough, according to Charles Webb Murphy, to play with the Cubs of Chicago

Next there is Gowdy, Stallings catcher. He was not good enough for John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants

Big Siege Guns Were Surprise to Germans

BERLIN, Oct. 6.—A member of the German parliament, who for nearly ten years has been connected with the army budget committee of the reichstag tells some interesting things of the history of the now famous 42-centimetre siege guns, which served the Germans so effectively at Liege and Namur

"The surprise that Germany possessed such mortars," he says, in an article published by the Ueue Zuercher Zeitung, "was as great in Germany as it was in other countries. After completion of secret tests with these guns some time ago, and the decision of the government to order a number of them, it was a problem as to how to keep the matter a secret

"Over forty officers took part in the discussions at which the military budget was prepared for submission to the budget committee of the reichstag. When a new clause was reached with only the heading 'Arms,' the chief of the department of arms requested that for the time being this subject could not be discussed. At the conclusion of the conference he told me in strict confidence that the title 'Arms' involved new siege mortars. The general staff requested urgently that not a word be said of the matter in the committee; not even the officers present had any knowledge of it

"Six weeks ago I visited an ammunition factory as member of the armament commission, and ascertained that any number of projectiles and cases for those mortars could be produced within a very short time. In reply to my question whether these mortars did not wear out rapidly, the director of the company said, 'They are not enough for the war in existence in the whole world to wear out a single mortar.' As a matter of fact, our army possesses 2,000 mortars of an earlier date, which are still usable

The official North German Gazette also discusses these new mortars with special reference to their projectiles. It says:

"If a weapon of the German army has a claim to popularity it is the 42-centimetre mortar, which in spite of their huge dimensions have managed to remain concealed. In fact, the nickname 'Brunner,' which has been given to these mortars, shows how far this popularity has progressed. One cannot be astonished that a shot which huris with accuracy a weight of 800 pounds over a space of a German mile to its goal, causes an atmospheric pressure which for miles around huris everything into the air. Reports have shown that the projectile, after it has left the mortar, causes a great noise only by exiting through the air"
