"Wonderful Exhibit" Telegram's Opinion

There is one exhibit in the Manufacturers' Land Products show which is certain to attract a lot of attention. It is that of Klamath county. This is the first time Klamath county has been represented in a Portland exhibit, but G. Roland Glaisyer, county agriculturist, and G. C. Blower, secretary of the Klamath Chamber of Commerce, who are in charge of the exhibit, assert with great emphasis that it is not going to be the last. Portland probably will say the same thing when it becomes acquainted with the resources of this big and rapidly developing wonderland of Southern Oregon.

Unjustly enough, the largest part of the Klamath county crop will not be on exhibit, for the simple reason that it walks on four feet. The land products show is confined to vegetable displays. Klamath will exhibit grains; yet, though she is shipping wheat and oats out at the rate of 300 carloads a week, the crop is not up to her largest one, that of cattle and hogs. The 300 carloads of grain a week is surpassed by livestock shipments, which aggregate $500,000. Of this, $422,000 is in cattle and $52,000 in hogs. The rest is in mules and horses. Hogs are a comparatively new crop for the county, but with three cuttings of alfalfa a year, and an unsurpassed soil for mangoes, it expects hogs eventually to share in importance with cattle.

Besides grain, the exhibit includes grasses, vegetables and fruits. The vegetables will probably be a particular surprise to those who are unacquainted with the resources of the Klamath country. It used to be fancied that vegetables did not thrive at an altitude of 4,000 feet. No more convincing refutation of this theory could be found than the Klamath vegetable exhibit. After seeing it, one understands why Mr. Glaisyer and Mr. Blower speak of Klamath county as one of the most productive vegetable areas in the state.

"No part of Oregon," said Mr. Glaisyer today, "offers the same opportunities to the man with small capital as Klamath county. The land is extremely fertile, and its resources have only been touched. The climate is the best in the state. All sorts of livestock do well. Wheat, which is a comparatively recent crop, brings in unflinching returns. People in the north of Oregon who haven't looked over Klamath county will do well to take note of its opportunity.

Mr. Blower said the war hadn't made any noticeable dents in the county's business.

"It did the wheat crop good," he said, "and it hasn't hurt anything else. Klamath county stands on such a solid basis that it would take more than an European war to jolt it. It raises things that the world has got to have."—Evening Telegram.

"ASPENDALE" IS NAME FOR MILLS

THRIFTY HILDEBRAND FARMER IS FIRST TO SEND IN FARM NAME—HAS A FINE RANCH OF 160 ACRES

The first farm name to be submitted for publication, following a recent editorial on the advantage of naming farms, is sent in by H. L. Mills of Hildebrand. His farm name is "Aspendale."

Mr. Mills is the type of man who will make a success of farming in any country, for he is a worker all the time. It is a few years since he acquired 160 acres of sage brush land near Hildebrand, and since then he has made it a highly productive farm, his grain and vegetable crops being exceptionally good.

A splendid well at "Aspendale" supplies water for the garden, and water for other irrigation on the ranch is available from the ditches of the Horton project.

Once a farmer decides upon a name for his ranch, he can have this name reserved for himself permanently in the county by registering his farm name with the county clerk. The fee for this is one dollar, and the name of the owner, the name of the farm and the description of the property should be sent the clerk at the same time.

Worden Makes Big Promises

said: "I have been hampered in my work, and haven't had a chance to show what I really could do. If all of the people of Klamath county would only get back of me and give me a free rein, you do not know what I would do."

Speaking of the court house, Worden told his hearers what a palatial home he had prepared for the county officers, and those having business with the county. "Up here," he said, pointing to the second story of the new court house on the screen, "we have the circuit court room, a library, a reading room, a witness room, a jury room. For the jurors we have a room with twelve comfortable beds, and when any of you have to serve on the jury you can go to bed and get a good comfortable rest. You can also have a shower bath if you want it. Many of the jurors have a lot of time on their hands, and they can go over here to the new Carnegie library and read some good instructive literature, or they can drop down into the basement, where we have a nice room where they can play dominoes or cards."

Judge Worden is rather strong on promises, and he passed out the usual number.

- He promised:
 - To get Klamath county out of debt.
 - To reduce and not increase the taxes.
 - To finish the court house next year.
 - To complete the Rattlesnake Point road next year.
 - To surface the county roads.
 - To build a bridge across Lost River.
 - To keep the roads in repair.
 - To build more roads.

To use his influence to get the Pacific highway and the Lincoln highway and the Central Oregon highway and all other highways built through Klamath county.

To get the state of Oregon to pay for building a road from Klamath Falls to Crater Lake.

And then to reduce the tax levy to eight mills.

"I think Hanks is a good man," said the speaker. "I once wrote him an insurance policy. I don't think you should change horses in the middle of the stream. It has cost you a lot of money to teach me as county judge, so why do you want to spend a lot more money to teach some other man?"

In conclusion Judge Worden urged everyone to vote for him, as he said he was afraid that if Mr. Hanks should receive a majority of votes, that he would be hindered in carrying out his plans by litigation. If some one did not do this they would be sure to try and recall him.

"You people elected me to this office for four years," said Worden, "and now the courts say I can have it for two years more, and I want to tell you now that I am going to keep it. Mr. Hanks had the opportunity to be the biggest man in Klamath county. When the supreme court decided that county judges were elected for six years, if he had come out and said, 'I will withdraw from the race and wait two years, there is no one in the county who could have beaten him.'"

Evidently Judge Worden did not think to apply this to himself. He had the same opportunity, and failed to take advantage of it.

Save Industrial Oregon

The one way to protect the future manufacturing and industrial development of Oregon is to vote against the vicious measures known as the "Water Front" bills, numbers 328 and 330 on the ballot. They are a direct attack on the prosperity of every man, woman and child in Oregon, and ought to be beaten.

These measures are not only a vicious thrust at Oregon's progress, but they are a veiled attack upon the public school system of the state, in that they will, if passed, deprive it of large sums of money every year.

Vote "NO" 328 and "NO" 331 Oregon Commercial Protective Association, Yeon Building, Portland, Oregon.

In addition to the four reels of pictures, a farce-comedy, "The Country Girl," will be on the program at the Orpheus tonight. Eight local people take part in this offering. These have been drilled by a competent instructor for the past several weeks, and are sure to please.

Mary Pickford, universally known as "America's Sweetheart," will be seen here next Saturday and Sunday at the Star, in David Belasco's production, "A Good Little Devil."

Little Mary has the honor of being the world's most popular motion picture actress. Old-time picture fans will remember Miss Pickford when she was the little leading lady for the Vitagraph company.

Since that time Mary Pickford has risen to fame as one of the greatest actresses of the legitimate stage. When David Belasco produced "A Good Little Devil," Mary Pickford was selected for the leading role. The play was a tremendous success. Moving picture critics of every theatrical journal in America come forth with the favorable comment which is to the effect that "A Good Little Devil," as produced in pictures, far exceeds the original production. It comes heralded as positively one of the greatest picture productions ever introduced to the American public. The picture is filmed by the Famous Players company. The original Broadway cast is used. David Belasco also takes part in the story.

Mrs. Flake, Henry E. Dixey, Edward Abeles, James O'Neill and Dustin Farnum will be among the stars seen at the Star theater in November.
