SOMETHING NEW FOR BABIES

"BETTER BABIES!"

What an optimistic, captivating sound those two words have!

It started with the idea of making the old-fashioned baby show a bit more satisfactory by having babies examined for physical perfection instead of dimples, golden ringlets and peaches-and-cream skins.

A Better Babies exhibit is a scientific examination of children five years of age or under, for physical and mental development.

Two hundred for mental and developmental tests, which prove whether baby takes proper notice of what goes on around him, walks, sits up and speaks properly and shows a mental growth to correspond to his age.

PROTECTIVE TARIFF INCREASES EXPORTS

A WRITER in the New York Times under date of December 5th, last, said: "That a tariff can effect exports can be classed as a new discovery in political economy."

It may be a new discovery to the author of that statement, but if one will study the statistics of our export trade during the operation of the Wilson-Gorman law which was in operation from 1894 to 1897, noting how they fell off after the repeal of the McKinley protective tariff; and, again, how they increased with the enactment of the Dingley protective law, and continued to increase with the passage of the Payne protective tariff law, which was in operation from 1909 to 1913; and once more took a downward trend following the enactment of the Underwood low duty law, no further argument will be needed to prove that under a protective policy our export trade increases, and under a democratic tariff policy it decreases.

The reason is simple enough: The policy of free trade, or a tariff for revenue only, means a losing fight for the American manufacturer to retain the domestic market. If he cannot command his home market, how in the name of common sense can we hope to see him extend his foreign markets?

Democratic legislation and argument of today would indicate the desire of that party to have the American manufacturer fabricate goods for the foreign trade, and let the foreigners manufacture for the American market. That would be a poor exchange, even if it were possible.

The best way to insure the extension of our foreign markets is to guarantee full time, full capacity, of American mills, which reduces the unit cost of production to a minimum, gives steady employment to labor, and enables us to market our surplus abroad.

That can never be done under a tariff policy which invites unlimited competition from European manufacturers and their pauper-paid labor unless the American workman is willing to accept the European standard, and no political party in this country has yet had the hardihood to advocate that.

Scattered Shots

SOME PEOPLE may say they don't take any stock in Klamath's future, but a resume of the shipments proves conclusively that a good many take stock out of here—leaving money to pay for same.

WE MAY BE somewhat afraid of rabies, but pity the poor Russians. Late dispatches say they have taken Erserum, which sounds appallingly like a skin trouble.

LOTS OF KIDS have told the truth, but they never had the press agent that our Country's Father must have employed.

ONCE THE work of organization of farmers for the eradication of gophers, squirrels, coyotes, rabbits and other pests is fully effected, it might be good to take up the work of eliminating that still greater menace—the knocker.

WITH HER right wing in Armenia and her left wing near Erserum, we might state advisedly that Russia is swooping down on the Turks.

DOPETOWN, Feb. 18.—Mike Flannery, who drives the delivery wagon for the Cut Rate Store, was arrested today charged with extreme cruelty to animals.

Jake Schultz, proprietor of the Cut Rate, bought an old white rack of bones for Flannery to drive. Flannery shocked everybody on Main street this morning by nearly beating the poor brute to death, accompanying the beating with a line of celtic calumny that is said to have been both scientific and gorgeous.

It developed at the hearing in court this afternoon that Mike was not altogether to blame. It seems that Schultz, with an eye to quick delivery service with an old horse, gave Mike a new whip and told him the horse's name was William of Orange, called Bill for short. Justice O'Flying heard the case against Flannery and fined Schultz $50.

BLY FOLKS KILL OFF STRAY CATS

EVIDENCE OF RABIES SYMPTOMS IN FELINE AT THE EDSELL RANCH RESULTS IN A LITTLE CLEAN UP

(Herald Special Service)

BLY, Feb. 18.—There has been quite a cleaning up of stray cats in this neighborhood as a result of the rabies. One of the cats at the James Edsell ranch recently developed symptoms of the dread malady, and as cats, like dogs, are effective in spreading the disease, the Toms and Maries have been doomed.

Aside from this, the rabies situation here seems to be well under control. The prompt action of stockmen and farmers in shutting up their stocks and muzzling their dogs, prevented what might have been a most serious spread.

Hans Schmidt at Last Pays Penalty for Murder

for three years had been performing the functions of a priest in New York, was arrested in the rectory of St. Joseph's church.

On the day of his arrest Schmidt made a full confession, in which he admitted that he killed the girl and cut her body into nine pieces. His statements on that occasion were so startling that his sanity was questioned, and experts were called by the state. A month later they pronounced him sane and shamming insanity.

Four alienists were then called by the defense. After several examinations they went on the stand at his two trials, the one in December, 1913, and the other in February, 1914, and swore that he was incurably insane.

At the first trial two of the jurors held that he was insane and a disagreement resulted. At both trials the state based its case largely on his own story at the time of his arrest, supported by a mass of corroborative testimony. At the second trial, although he interposed the very same defense, he was convicted.

Schmidt was sentenced on February 12. Three days afterward he sent for Assistant District Attorney Delehanty and confessed that he had been shamming insanity up to and during the time of his trials, and that the ideas which had been advanced to the alienists had been gained not from his own experiences, but from reading a medical book dealing with dementia praecox.

He then proceeded to tell Mr. Delehanty an entirely different story than the one on which he was convicted, the second being to the general effect that Anna Aumuller had died as the result of a criminal operation. The papers in opposition to Schmidt's motion for a new trial reveal that, besides the statement made to his own attorney, which was subsequently told in affidavit form, that he made two other contradictory statements, making four different stories in all.

Schmidt's contradictions finally resolved themselves into an affidavit which he made on October 30, 1914, and which was issued as the basis for a motion for a new trial.

This affidavit was to the effect that a friend had performed an operation on Anna Aumuller, as the result of which she died, and that another woman had been present in the capacity of a nurse. Dr. Leo, he avers, was called in after her death and asked to issue a death certificate, but refused.

Then he asserted that his friend cut up the body. He swears that his previous statements were made in an effort to shield these people.
