FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

DRUGGIST SAYS LADIES ARE USING RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe. Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre, and gives it an appearance of abundance. Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart color and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

IS IT WAR?

IT WILL be time enough for the United States to act in Mexico after information is received from other than Mexican sources. Before we plunge finally into war, we want to know on what account we are going to war.

It is doubtful now if the worst can be avoided. Though reports are conflicting, the attitude of Carranza seems to indicate a desire for hostilities. If that is his mood, there is nothing we can do but go to the front.

If undertaken, it will be a serious business. In 1912, military men at Washington, in response to a request from President Taft, estimated that it would require 500,000 men at a cost of a million dollars a day for two years to make military intervention in Mexico an effective reality.

It will not take very long for us to capture the capitals of all the Mexican states, occupy all the seaport cities and take the city of Mexico itself. But all that would be only the beginning of the task.

There would remain, once the intervention is undertaken, the necessity of occupying the entire country by the armed forces of the United States, its policing by American soldiers as thoroughly as the city of New York is guarded by day and by night, the elimination of the bandits who now ravage most of the country, and the substitution of law, order and real government.

It took Porfiro Diaz twenty years to accomplish the task which America will necessarily address herself if real intervention is attempted. That is why military men, skilled in military problems, talk of intervention in terms of hundreds of thousands of men, years of time and millions of money.

So widely scattered are the interests incident to pacification that there is no part of the country where it would not be necessary to maintain detachments of American troops for police purposes.

As we go toward the interior from the border and from ports at which there are railroads, thousands upon thousands of soldiers will be required to guard railroads from destruction.—Portland Journal.

have an immense supply, owing to their best root industry. Salt shouds but pepper is scarce. Ham, bacon or pork in any form is unknown to civilians.

Eggs in April were sixty cents a dozen, and laying hens were so valuable that no chickens were killed for food until their laying capacity declined.

A dressed chicken in a Cologne shop brought $2.50. During the one day while it rested in the shop window many persons stopped to look at it.

The shooting of pigeons in the streets or on the rooftops is severely punished, but it is said that the pigeon population is being rapidly diminished. Zeppelin crews that have passed over Berlin at low altitudes in recent celebrations have commented on the number of pigeon traps they have seen on the roofs of office buildings. On this account there is a joke current in Berlin that the porters of the office buildings have the best fed families in the city.

Undoubtedly, Germany has food—beef, pork, fats, oils and most of the other edibles that make eating worth while. Where do they go? Who gets them?

The soldiers. Behind the German lines are cattle sheds, always full of livestock. From all I could hear in Rotterdam, the German soldiers have no complaint to make of their food. A civilian in Germany these days is an incubus, more or less. He must feed himself and his family as best he can.

The next three months, until crop time, of course, will be the hardest of the year for German civilians. They are struggling along with last year's leavings. All Germany is waiting with bated breath, to see how the autumn crops turn out.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

"The Heritage"

By Rev. E. C. Richards, Pastor Grace M. E. Church

"Oh, thou afflicted, tossed with tempest and not comforted . . . this is the heritage." Isaiah 54, 11 and 17. Gravity

The very force that holds all things on the earth makes necessary the carrying of burdens. Without gravity, beasts of burden would be useless, train service would be impossible, shoulders would never ache, feet would never be weary, pain would be unknown. But with these freedoms life itself would be extinct. Better without these freedoms than never to be at all. Better to be tossed with tempest and not be comforted than not to exist.

So, too, the drawing power of God, which forever calls and draws us, itself makes possible many burdens of soul, many tossings with tempests of doubt, of failure, of soul pain. The text can be said only to a life that is intact with another life, a soul in meeting touch with God. Heart suffering, is the clash of soul with soul. Yet suffering can be too great, and often is. And this is due, mostly, to our failure to seek for the best in life.

We fall to see God at first hand. He has to be pointed out to us. The successful novelist is he who can put upon paper the very things which we can see every day in the life about us. Harold Bell Wright will take us to the Ozarks and picture to us sunsets no more beautiful than those in Oregon, yet we will bury our noses in a book and read with delight, and leave unseen our own over the hill on the peaks of the Pelican mountains. He will picture to us a man of superb strength, dripping with sweat and grime of an engine and we gaze in admiration, while in Klamath Falls are men as tall and as strong, whose hands are just as sooty and whose locks are just as golden, and all about us are men with as high ideals as we as true a sense of honor. He will picture to us Sammy, a woman of grace and beauty and strength of soul, and we wish we could know her. But she is here, while we have sought her in the pages of a book. Everywhere there run the streets of Klamath Falls little girls with a pink cheeks and as golden curls and as bright blue eyes as ever were put into the pages of a book, but we fail to know them. Some day the Klamath country will produce a prophet in song and a prophet in story who shall show us our unseen heritage at our very doors. We let gravity master us instead of mastering it ourselves.

Holy Burdens We are tossed with tempest and not comforted because we miss the heritage at hand. We are not content to be gleaners, yet Ruth was such, and she became the great grandmother of David and the Psalms, and that was worth living for, because the power of the waves of the Psalms after 3,000 years still rolls on stirring up human hearts to new life and courage. We gather a great deal of the froth of consolation and when the breath of life strikes it, it evaporates. We ought to try deeper. Coleridge was not a great poet, and of his poetry this stanza is one of the least useful, though one of the best sounding: "In Kanadu did Kuba Khan In stately pleasure dome decree Where Alp, the sacred river, ran Through caverns measureless to man, Down to a sunless sea." All sound and nothing in it but a castle and an underground river. But in this one, Tenyson reaches down into life and brings out something worth keeping: "Life is not an idle ore, But iron dug from central gloom, And heated hot with burning fears, And dipped in baths of hissing tears, And battered with the shocks of doom.

To shape and use." In that stanza you can hear the ringing of anvils, the stroke of hammer, and can see the grime of a furnace, the glow of white hot ore, the shaping of tools, the tension of muscles, the money that buys bread, the sick room, the doctor's call, the open grave, the wider open gates of heaven. That is a stanza worth the gleaming. It lifts and carries holy burdens. And holy burdens ought to be borne by the great powers in and around us.

The Heritage "Oh, though afflicted, tossed with tempest and not comforted . . . this is the heritage," is worth the gleaming. It strikes home in four places. It strikes to the central energy of the soul, the will. Through it we discover that when our choices are wrong, our burdens are increased. It follows hot upon the other chapter where we read, "All we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all."

It strikes at the central organ, the human conscience. As the heart keeps going the flow of blood, so does the conscience keep going the soul of man, by which he is conscious of his sin, his God, and the way out to a greater life. If strikes home to that central malady, sin. There seems to be something in Jesus that most men have lost sight of. We call Him the Prince of Peace, yet we do not have peace. We, like the text, are "afflicted, tossed with tempest, and not comforted." It blows out for us the central destiny, redemption. "This is the heritage." "He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and by his stripes we are healed." So, out of affliction, and bruising, and failures, we come up to Him in peace.
