KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON MONDAY, JULY 16, 1916

SHOULD BENEFIT FROM LESSON

IT IS a pretty safe bet that Klamath Falls will have a celebration next Fourth of July. The experience of the past week has forcibly brought home to the business interests of the city and others the necessity of providing entertainment in Klamath Falls for the thousands of people from the factories, mills, woods and the farmers from the surrounding country, who very naturally demand some sort of celebration during the week of our great national holiday.

If they cannot find entertainment in Klamath Falls, they are forced to go elsewhere, as was the case this year. Aside from the standpoint of good business, it is the duty of Klamath Falls to furnish entertainment on these occasions for these people, who, by their patronage, support the business houses, and make Klamath Falls the thriving, prosperous city that it is today.

Klamath Falls is better able to stage a real celebration than any other community in Southeastern Oregon. It has ample accommodations, in the way of hotels and eating places for most any sized crowd that could be secured from this territory, and about all it needs is a good sized park, close in, where out-door attractions can be staged.

The people of Klamath Falls have been very active since the Fourth in urging the need of a celebration for next year. It is true that most of this has been talk, but we believe that right now is the time for action. Steps should be taken while the interest of the people has been aroused, for securing suitable grounds.

It will be only a few years before it will be impossible to secure property, of the desired size and location, at a reasonable figure, and the business interests of Klamath Falls will make a grave mistake if they delay action in this matter for another year.

NO PREPAREDNESS FOR PEACE

IF AMERICAN business can weather the storm of a world war, it surely ought to be able to weather the comparatively calm of a world peace, reason the democrats. This is the kind of argument one hears on the back porches of sanitariums. American business has weathered the storm of war because American products have been without competition and have been necessary to the conduct of war. When the conflict ceases, when Europe lays aside gun and grenade and takes up spade and hammer, then will come the real test. Then American business will face the inexorable law of the survival of the fittest.

Instead of preparing for the day, democrats are giving voice to full-dinner-pail orations, uttering specious platitudes of which the above is a fair sample, and are prophesying prosperity. If the fortunes are kind, the crisis will not arrive until the voters have had opportunity to make needed change in our economic leadership. Democratic tariff boards, anti-dumping legislation, etc., are mere vote-baiting sops. They are conceived in insincerity. The real need is genuine protection and a republican administration at the helm, and the country will so express itself in November.

Scattered Shots

AT AN AVERAGE of ten dollars each, how much money do you suppose the thousands of Klamath county people spent away from home on the Fourth?

YESTERDAY was clean-up day in baseball circles. The diamond was subjected to a good cleaning, ditto willows.

ONE CITIZEN suggests a big public park along the lake front. Sounds good. Why not get busy?

A KLAMATH FALLS contractor will handle all paving work so far awarded this year by the city. Also, Klamath Falls laborers will do the work.

CRATER LAKE will soon be open to travel. An inspection and little improvement of the roads in that direction wouldn't be a bad idea.

Lieutenants Correll and Robert H. Willis, the aviators of the American army, who were lost in the desert in Chihuahua after they had started from San Antonio to join General Pershing's force, were later reported to have been saved.

Government Encourages Goats in National Forests

Herald Special Service

PORTLAND, July 15.—In connection with the effort to introduce the best methods of handling all classes of live stock on the national forests, a study of the goat industry has been inaugurated by forest service officials. In 1915 over 50,000 Angora goats were grazed on national forests in six states, mostly in the Southwest.

The goats are grazed in bands of 600 to 2,000, although the smaller herds are more common, and feed mostly on brushy undergrowth. Sheds are necessary during the kidding season, since the newly born kids are almost as helpless as babies, and must be protected from the cold and wet. When grown the goats have considerably more agility and courage than sheep, and fight off coyotes and other predatory animals. Unlike sheep, which can go long periods without water, the goats must have water frequently, and their range has to be planned with this in mind.

Under the new methods which are being tried, herders must take more care of their flocks. The goats are not allowed to spend more than one night at any camp, and are handled in such a way that all the range is used, but not over-grazed. Officials who are watching the experiment say that the approved methods will doubtless enable the owners to derive greater profits from their herds, and make it possible to better the condition of the range.

Many people think that the foresters are opposed to letting goats range on the national forests, but officials say that this is not true. In some places, particularly in hardwood regions, the goats damage young forest growth. In many of the coniferous forests of the West, however, this damage is slight if the range is not overstocked and the animals are properly handled. Often, it is said, they are of real benefit in keeping down inflammable brush and thus aiding in protecting forests from fire.

In the national forests of Oregon and Washington, on the west slope of the Cascades, it is said that there are many areas of open brush land suitable for grazing goats. Such areas may be found on the Siuslaw, Siskiyou, Crater, Umpqua and Santiam forests in Oregon and on the Columbia, Ranier and Olympic forests in Washington. These areas would take care of from 20,000 to 25,000 head of goats, and are easily accessible from railroad points.

The outlook for the goat industry appears at present to be very bright. The clip from Angora goats has amounted to 500,000 pounds per year in the Northwest, the Willamette Valley being the center of the industry in this region.

The value of goats for meat is now becoming an important factor in the industry. Formerly there was much prejudice against goat meat, and although much of it was marketed as mutton, it brought the stockman but $2.50 a head. The latest quotations, however, show $5.50 a head. In Southern Oregon a stockman was heard to remark that he could easily get $4.50 a head for all the goats he could drive to market. Mohair prices, too, have gone up from 5 to 10 cents per pound during the past year.

LOCAL PERMITS TO DIVERT WATER

7,616 ACRES OF LAND TO BE IRRIGATED UNDER PERMITS ISSUED BY STATE ENGINEER DURING LAST QUARTER

During the quarter ending June 20, 1916, State Engineer John H. Lewis issued 127 permits for the appropriation of water, including six for the construction of reservoirs. According to these permits it is proposed to irrigate 7,616 acres of land, store 1,440 acre feet of water, and develop power at a number of small individual power plants for private use.

"It is a notable fact," said Lewis, "that the permits issued during this quarter are for comparatively small appropriations of water, indicating that the development work going on along this line is being undertaken by the land owners themselves for the improvement of their farms."

The following permits were issued in Klamath county: J. S. Evans of Bonanza secured a permit to store six acre feet of the waters of Bald Butte and Round Prairie Creek for the irrigation of 44 acres of land.

Sprat Wells of Ely was granted a permit for the irrigation of 279 acres of land, diverting water from South Fork Sprague River in section 26, township 36 south, range 14 east.

R. A. Summit of Klamath Falls secured permission to irrigate 400 acres, diverting water from Klamath River in section 24 township 39 south, range 8 east.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

DARKENS BEAUTIFULLY AND RESTORES ITS NATURAL COLOR AND LUSTRE AT ONCE

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the sage tea and sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 50 cents a bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application of two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.
