HENLEY HAPPENINGS

A patriotic rally and a big Red Cross entertainment will be held at Henley on Friday evening, April 12. A beautiful silk quilt donated by Mrs. H. S. Newton will be raffled.

On Friday evening, March 21st, a meeting of the High School Teachers' Parents Association will be held at the school house. All those who are interested in the progress and up-building of the high school are urged to be present.

To organize a Red Cross Auxiliary at Henley, a meeting was held on Friday afternoon, and the first steps toward an organization effected. Another meeting will be held Thursday at which a representation of the Klamath Falls chapter will be present to aid in getting the work under way. An invitation is extended to all those who are willing to give their services.

David McComb, who has recently become a land owner in the Henley district, has been busy moving his house to his portion of the ranch purchased by Snow & McComb.

Six of the nine students from Klamath County which were given memberships in the Rainbow regiment of Oregon for selling $50 worth of the Thrift and War Saving Stamps, were from the Henley high school.

Andrew Folsom, Leonard Lewis and Walter Stewart have dropped out of high school to assist with the spring farming.

Great interest is being shown in the Junior Red Cross work. Several infants' layettes are all but completed, and others are well under way, as well as comfort bags and other articles. Many are also engaged in knitting, making scrap books, gun wipes, etc., and some of the boys are collecting all kinds of old junk and salvage.

At a recent meeting of the Henley Parents-Teachers Association, the sum of $55, received from the sale of the quilt made by the ladies, was voted turned over to the Red Cross chapter.

He expects that the rate of marriages will continue or increase, and requests that the government grant free passages to these wives when they are ready to go to Australia with their husbands. The government will do this.

It is said that the Australian soldiers are peculiarly susceptible to the Scotch girls.

Move For Increased Food Production Starts

STATE COLLEGE, Penn., March 19.—To prevent an annual loss estimated at 134,556,000 bushels of wheat, oats, barley and rye, and "tremendous losses" in other staple crops, specialists on agriculture have organized a war emergency board of American plant pathologists. This board has inaugurated a nation wide campaign to increase food production thru control of destructive plant diseases during the coming growing season.

Because the consumer pays for every rotted and scabby potato and every smutted grain of wheat or oats the farmer grows, without having them as food, hundreds of trained workers intend to carry the campaign into all the states. Teachers, research workers and students are being enlisted in the service, which will show the farmers how to increase their yields of disease-free crops.

These preventable diseases will be attacked vigorously as the first step of a comprehensive program to prevent food waste. Further efforts to save food are to be made by teaching methods of eliminating losses in transportation, storage and in households. The war emergency board, of which Dr. F. D. Kern, plant pathologist at the Pennsylvania State College, is a member, expects to give direct aid to growers as to the availability and prices of spray materials. Assistance will be given to the plant disease survey undertaken by the federal department of agriculture, in co-operation with the state colleges of agriculture and other agencies. Plans and projects for the campaign were considered at a special meeting of the board in Washington this month. The country was divided into six sections, each in charge of a commissioner selected by the board.

Why We Are At War With Germany

By EPHRAIM DOUGLASS ADAMS Executive Head, History Department, Leland Stanford Junior University

It is commonly said that this war is one in which America was forced to take part in order to "make the world safe for democracy." What does the phrase mean? The theories and acts of the German military autocracy definitely deny the right of the people of a state to rule themselves. The German people, in spite of forms of government that make a pretense of popular control, have no such actual control over their government as exists in democratically organized nations. In those nations the governors can be removed by a vote of the people in a general election; in Germany the people have not this power. The aristocracy of Germany understand this difference, and are afraid of the spread of democracy in Germany. The whole, much-admired "efficiency" of Germany is primarily due to a desperate and constant effort by Germany's rulers to divert the German people from thoughts of self-government, by offering them material prosperity. And the rulers have succeeded. One of the causes of this war was the necessity, by still further "glorious acquisitions of territory," to hush the murmurings of political discontent in Germany. Victory in war, every so often, is a necessity of the German system. "It is for social as much as for national and political reasons that we must fix our minds incessantly upon war." "Success is necessary to gain influence over the masses," wrote Bernhardi; and General von Bissing, just before his death, wrote a "Political Testament," in which he argued for the retention of Belgium, because, unless it were annexed, the prestige of the military autocracy would receive a fatal blow. Are we—the allies—then fighting to impose upon Germany a different system; is that the meaning of "making the world safe for democracy?" Ellihu Root says that American democratic ideals include "liberty not for themselves alone, but for all who are oppressed." Lloyd George asserts that if all countries had been democratically organized, this war would not have taken place; that this war will determine not merely international relations, but will affect the lives of the peoples within their own nations, for generations to come; that this war is to end in "international democracy," i. e., in liberty, equality and fraternity, between nations, great and small. General Smuts, formerly a soldier against Great Britain in South Africa, says that the essence of this war is the question whether governments should be founded on military might or on "principles of equity, justice, fairness and equality." Various writers have depicted this war as a test of democracy, to determine whether democracy can adjust itself to an emergency so that by sheer efficiency it shall at least equal the efficiency of a military autocracy, and assert that on this ground alone the future government of all the nations of the world is at stake. Will Crooks, the British labor leader, says that the British workman knows that this war "is a people's war. We are all in it, the man at the village pump and in the fields, the blacksmith, the carpenter and joiner, the shipwright, and the man of leisure. We are standing together because we are fighting for liberty." Yes, this war is one in which ideals of government, of individual liberty, of civilization itself are in conflict. Democracy is lined up against autocracy. The war is in absolute fact a war of ideals. But we are not fighting to impose our ideals upon any nation. What we are fighting for, in "making the world safe for democracy," is to prevent a military autocracy from imposing its authority and its ideals upon us. We are ready to keep on minding our own business, and to let other nations do the same. A military autocracy that proposes to conquer the world must be defeated, to the point where it renounces meddling with other nations, great or small, or there is no peace in the world. That is the issue at stake, and in it rests our safety and the safety of the world. This is the fifth of a series of ten articles by Pro. Adams. Space donated by Children's Oregon Power Company.
