

Cold North Winds Retard State Crops

PORTLAND, May 31.—Continued low night temperatures, deficient sunshine, with cold north winds and little or no rainfall, were the predominating features of the past week, according to the weather bureau's summary of weather and crop conditions, and these proved very detrimental to crop germination and growth in practically all portions of the state. Light to heavy frosts occurred on these nights, but the damage was mostly confined to tender vegetation on low lands and fruits in a few places. Farm work kept well up, and in scattered localities was somewhat in advance of the average season, the summary declared. Winter wheat is heading in southern counties, and needs rain to make it fill, or the crop will be cut for hay; it is turning yellow, and required warm weather for best results. East of the Cascades this staple is in better shape but is beginning to show the ill effects of drought and frosty nights. Winter rye and barley are also heading out, but require moisture to make a full crop. Growth was very slow, and the stand was being destroyed by wire worms in some fields. The germination and growth of the spring sown wheat and oats were retarded by the cold weather; they are coming up spotted in some places on account of drought, and in others are being infested with aphids and showing poor stands.

Droughty conditions are also having a deleterious effect on grasses. Alfalfa is short, being only about one-half the acreage where it is being cut in Southern Oregon. Pastures are drying up, and need warm rains greatly, especially in the foot hills. Aphids has practically destroyed some fields of vetch in the Willamette Valley, and the ground is being plowed for planting to other crops.

The cold weather appears to be delaying sheep shearing in some districts, but this work is about completed in others, and the sheep turned on range.

Apples, pears and cherries have set well in the Hood River Valley, with heavy crops in prospect. In southern counties fruit made slow growth and was injured some by frosts, but on the whole is in fair to good shape.

Some frost injury to corn, potatoes and gardens was reported. Corn is turning yellow from lack of sunshine.

Dunkirk Declared Most Besieged City

LONDON, May 31.—Dunkirk, "The City of Dreadful Night," it is pointed out by a correspondent of the Daily Mail, has been mentioned perhaps more often in French communiques during this war than any other city. There are weeks when it is rare for a communique not to conclude with the words, "Enemy airplanes dropped bombs on Dunkirk during the night," or "A long-range gun has fired into Dunkirk."

That seaport, the nearest of all to the firing line, is now scarcely less dear to the hearts of the French people than Verdun, and, like Verdun, it has been decorated for its courage under fire. Recently France's biggest ship was launched there.

The amazing thing about Dunkirk, the writer continues, is that it is still a city. Its inhabitants, refusing to leave, have carried on its normal life with indomitable courage. Tramway cars run as usual along its cobbled streets, and well-stocked shops are open every day. Weekly in the main square market is held, and the countless stalls are well patronized by the shrewd housewives. The frequent bombardments from sea, land and air are not laughed at, also they are taken as a matter of course. Bedrooms, instead of being on the upper floors of the house, are now in the cellars, and public dugouts dot the town as do the air raid shelters of London.

Scarcely a house or wall in the town remains without its record of the enemy's continual efforts to destroy Dunkirk.
