

Warning Against Ocular Effect of the Eclipse

PORTLAND, June 7.—Looking forward to the total eclipse of the sun tomorrow, a nation-wide effort is being made to warn people generally and school children particularly against the serious ocular effect likely to follow viewing an eclipse with un-protected eyes. Direct sunlight has a destructive effect on the retina, due to the chemical action of the ultra violet rays in the spectrum. Blondes and individuals with light colored irides are affected more than individuals with more pigment in their skin and the ocular tissue. The action of the sunlight causes a condition known as the solar glare, or solar blindness. The blindness may last from a few days to a few months, or may even be permanent. As there is practically no treatment that avails when one is stricken, it behooves us to sound a warning against the danger of looking at the sun at any time, whether in eclipse or not, with the naked eye, or only partially protected eyes.

Ordinary tinted glasses do not furnish sufficient protection. It requires a very deeply colored glass, or better still, a piece of smoked glass. After the eclipse of April 12, 1912, many thousands of cases of blindness were reported in Europe alone, and it is hoped that by a campaign of education the occurrence of similar cases this year may be prevented. Auto Replaces Dogs On Trapping Expedition

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, May 15.—(By Mail.)—To a "cheecako," which, in the vernacular of Alaska, signifies an individual who, in the days of the storied west would have been called a tenderfoot, falls the distinction of introducing trapping de luxe into the north. Harry Beable, not long from the "outside," conceived the idea of setting out on a trapping expedition in an automobile instead of by dog team. Frank Burgess went with him. Loading their outfit in a light car the pair set out for the Big Delta country, despite the snow and almost impassable roads. So far as is known here, the idea has proved a success.

HUNS ADOPT COWARDLY MEASURES

NEW YORK, June 7.—"Don't use your wireless and we won't shoot," is the newest "made in Germany" war slogan, under which the emperor's submarine commanders are carrying out their campaign of frightfulness into American Atlantic waters, according to reports among 250 survivors of the steamship Carolina, who were brought to this port aboard a coastwise schooner.

Stories told by passengers and crew of the sunken vessel indicated that Edwin W. Vogel of New York City, the ship's 19 year old chief wireless operator, played a spectacular part in the dramatic raiding of the Carolina.

When the submarine messaged the "don't wireless and we won't shoot," Vogel defiantly repeated his S. O. S. signals which he had already begun flashing and was on the verge of answering queries from Cape May and the Brooklyn navy yard stations for the Carolina's position when Captain T. R. D. Barbour, Vogel's commander, ordered him to quit his key and see whether the Germans would keep their pledge, passengers declared.

Captain Barbour said he decided to accept the proposition laid down by the U-boat commander because he believed dissent would have meant forfeiture of the lives of the women and children aboard the vessel.
