THE SALEM STEAM LAUNDRY.

The Edict Has Gone Forth—The Chinese Must Go.

Mr. David T. Williams, a gentleman who has had much experience in the management of steam laundries, is in Salem and has to-day completed arrangements for the establishment of such an institution in our city. To say that is a "long felt want" would but faintly convey the idea. The Chinese wash houses have seen their day in our fair city, and it is but a reflection of a universal thought when we say that Mr. Williams will receive the hearty support of our entire city. Burst the trust! let improvement step forward.

The Witness Disappeared.

Saturday J. A. McDonald was arrested on charge of larceny from a dwelling, at the instance of a woman named Williams, an inmate of Susie Jones' dive. It appears McDonald had, when in the state of "high lonesome," taken a clock belonging to the demi-monde. He waived examination and is held in sum of $100 bonds, awaiting the action of the grand jury. That he might not be before the courts alone he caused Susie Jones to be arrested on charges of selling liquor without license and maintaining a house of ill fame. On the former charges she is held for investigation by the grand jury, and gave bond for her appearance. On the latter count she appeared before the U. S. court this morning, for trial, but McDonald, the prosecuting witness having failed to put in an appearance, the case was dismissed.

Polygamy Fast Disappearing.

Two of the five members of the Utah Commission have filed with the secretary of the interior a minority report of the commission.

Their report gives a very favorable account of the progress made during the year in the work of reform, and says that there is a decided and rapidly increasing disposition on the part of the Mormons to abandon polygamy and to yield obedience to the law. The commissioners believe that the Mormons have come to the deliberate conclusion that further resistance is useless. They think that no further legislation restrictive of the political rights of the Mormons is needed. They comment upon the tendency manifested to turn the crusade from polygamy against the Mormon church and its government, and express themselves as being opposed to such a course, and favor the punishment of criminal offenses, but not religious creeds.

The recommendation made last year in the minority report is renewed that an amendment to the constitution of the United States be adopted prohibiting the institution or practice of polygamy in any form in the States or Territories or other places over which the United States has jurisdiction.

Methuselah Made Him.

A story is told on a Sunday school teacher in a certain back woods settlement in a neighboring country which is worth publishing. She has a new class of young scholars, the parents of which had neglected to give them any instructions in their catechism whatsoever. Going to the first boy in the class she asked who made him. He did not know. She told him God, and urged him to remember it. Of the next boy she asked who was the oldest man. He did not know, and the teacher told him Methuselah. So she went on down the class, asking each a question and giving them the answer.

While she was thus engaged the first boy went to the basket after some water. The teacher returned to the head of the class, and not knowing any one was absent, she asked the boy who made him.

Without hesitation the boy quickly replied, "Methuselah!"

"No," exclaimed the teacher in astonishment, "God made you!"

"No, he didn't," persisted the urchin, with confidence, "the boy God made is gone after water." The teacher gave up the class.

ANOTHER SAD SUICIDE.

John Heinz, of Silverton, Destroys Himself with a Revolver.

IN A PIT OF WILD INSANITY

He Sends Two Bullets Crashing Through His Brain.

Yesterday morning the residents of Silverton and vicinity, were thrown into a wild state of excitement by the report that John Heinz of Garfield precinct

HAD KILLED HIMSELF.

Scarcely before the soil had settled over the lifeless body of R. L. Milster, and lacking only about four hours of being one week after that gentleman ended his existence, the community was called upon to listen to the details of a self-murder more shocking if possible, than the first.

A JOURNAL reporter heard the announcement of the self destruction and in company with Assessor A. F. Blackerby started for the SCENE OF THE SUICIDE.

Arriving at the Heinz house, in Garfield precinct, six miles from Silverton, it was found that Coroner D. C. Byland had arrived. Immediately he empaneled a jury and began the inquest.

The first witness called was Mrs. Heinz, the wife of the deceased, who testified as follows:

Mr. Heinz had been complaining about feeling unwell for the past three or four years, and had been under the doctors care; he had repeatedly said that he intended to kill himself, and on one occasion remarked that he would kill her and then take his own life, as there was nothing but misery in this world for him and that she was injuring herself by working too hard, and if they were both dead and in another world they could be happy together. That on Saturday evening he had read an account of the suicide of R. L. Milster in the CAPITAL JOURNAL and made the remark that HE WOULD BE THE NEXT TO GO.

On Sunday morning they both arose about the same time, and after she had made a fire in the cooking stove, asked him to come and get warm, but he went out doors without saying a word. Shortly afterwards she followed and found him standing in the door of the granary, which is located a short distance from the house, holding in his hand a pistol, which belonged to one of the boys. She asked him for the weapon and he told her it was not loaded, but she insisted on gaining possession of it, and he said he would put it away where the boys could not find it, and stepping upon a box made a movement as if to lay the pistol upon a shelf. She then stooped down to pick up a piece of rope lying on the ground at her feet when she was startled by hearing the report of the weapon, and upon raising up, noticed her husband falling over. She started to go into the granary where he lay, when he again

RAISED THE PISTOL TO HIS HEAD and fired. She then left the building screaming for help.

Mr. Moser was next called and deposed as follows:

Had been acquainted with deceased for several years, and had for some time past considered him insane. Had heard him make the remark, "I may see you pick hops this year but I never will another year, for if I do not die a natural death

I WILL KILL MYSELF."

Several other witnesses were called but nothing of importance was elicited.

After a few remarks by the coroner the case was submitted to the jury who returned

THE FOLLOWING VERDICT:

We, the undersigned, empaneled by the coroner of Marion county, to inquire into the death of John Heinz, find that he came to his death from a gun shot wound inflicted by his own hands.

C. D. HARTMAN, W. M. MOSER, HENRY DALEY, J. H. WHITLOCK, WM EISENHART, J. G. MOORE.

Mr. Heinz was born in Germany and emigrated to the United States when eighteen years of age and settled in Wisconsin. He enlisted in the First Wisconsin volunteers, and served through the war. He moved to Oregon in 1875 and purchased a farm in the Garfield precinct, 5 1/2 miles from Silverton, where he has since resided. He was a member of the Silverton post of the Grand Army of the Republic. He has been considered out of his head for several years, but has been closely watched, and until this morning, has never attempted to do himself injury.

The weapon with which he ended his life was an old style five chamber, 32 caliber "Leader" revolver, which contained four cartridges. The first cartridge exploded was what is known as a "short range," and entering his forehead, about one inch above the right eye, was flattened out against the skull. This shot must have rendered him senseless and he fell to the floor, but in a few seconds recovered and again placing the weapon against the center of his forehead, exploded a "long range" cartridge and this time the ball went crashing through his brain.

Deceased was 49 years of age and leaves his family in good circumstances.
