THE MILITARY BOYS.

An Organization Deserving the Encouragement and Financial Backing of Citizens.

Salem is the seat of government of a growing and prosperous state; it is one of the most naturally beautiful locations laid out by the Great Architect; here our governor and other state officers have their residence (or should have) during their terms of service, and when the laws of the state made provision for military organizations it was without doubt expected that here would be one of the most important bodies of that kind in the whole state—the best drilled, best equipped and provided with the most convenient and commodious armory, that they might be ever ready at the call of the executive either for pageantry and display on festive or holiday occasions, or for actual service in case of need.

There may be a disposition among some people to belittle the importance of these organizations and to make sport of them as useless and unworthy of encouragement, but a little thought reveals a great deal in them to commend. In these military companies, the young members receive lessons of cleanliness, order, promptness and discipline which are invaluable in all the relations of life; they are given a physical training which makes them nobler in their bearing, more graceful in their action, and implants in them a self-reliance and manly courage, besides a control of nerve and temper, which tend to make them better and more useful citizens, even though they may be never called upon to use their martial skill in the defense of their state or nation, or in the suppression of local insurrections.

We have in Salem a company most deserving in every respect, much better drilled than many companies provided with armories and all other conveniences. But to attain that perfection it is this laudable ambition to reach, they will be compelled to secure better and more roomy quarters than they now have. Under recent legislative enactments it was hoped the county would make an appropriation for the purpose, but the exigencies created by the loss of bridges precludes a thought of such hope now, hence other means need to be suggested.

In conversation with a prominent military man it is learned that it is customary in many places of this kind for business men throughout the city to become honorary members of the military companies and contribute a small amount, say $10 a year toward their maintenance. Such action here would enable the members of Co. B, to rent the old armory, which their present resources make it impossible for them to do, and they are confined to quarters entirely inadequate, unfit and a disgrace to the city. The business men of Salem are requested to give this matter consideration, and those who think the suggestion proper and desire to help in carrying it out, will please report to Captain M. W. Hunt, that they may be enrolled as honorary members.

FOR ALASKA.—Lewis H. Tarpley, recently appointed U. S. commissioner at Ounulaska, Alaska, took this afternoon's train for Portland, where he will board the steamer for San Francisco to-night, and from there will start immediately for his destination. Mr. Tarpley takes with him the best wishes of a host of friends, who have watched his upward career with pleasure, his achievements for one of his age being remarkably creditable. That he will succeed in his new duties is an assured fact. He is accompanied on the trip by Archie Allen, a grandson of Mr. S. A. Trimble, of this city, who is in the employ of the Alaska Commercial company, and will be located in the Aleutian islands not far from Mr. Tarpley.

FROM OHIO.—T. B. Baker, C. H. Herost, wife and son, of Wapakonata, Auglaize county, Ohio, have arrived in the city, Mr. Baker with a view of making his future home here and Mr. Herost and family on a tour of pleasure and looking up a location. The former has been in the office of sheriff and county clerk at his home several years and the latter is cashier of a bank. Mrs. Baker, wife of the former, has been in Salem since last fall and is so pleased with it that she insisted on having her husband come too.

BRIDGE AT JEFFERSON.—A dispatch from Jefferson in the Albany Herald says, the citizens of this place held a meeting yesterday to consider the necessity of a bridge over the river here, at which they appointed a committee for each county to confer with their respective county courts in regard to the matter. The people here are in earnest about getting a bridge.

J. L. Mitchell, of the JOURNAL local staff, was a passenger for Portland this morning and may extend his trip to Puget sound points.

STATE CONVENTION CALLED.

Salem Within Three Votes of Being Selected, and a Little United Action Would Have Secured it.

County Chairman Burnett, who attended the meeting of the Republican State Central Committee at Portland Wednesday, as proxy from Marion county, returned last night. The attendance was large, and great interest taken. There was a discussion over place of holding convention, Portland and Salem were the only candidates and on rollcall the former got 14 votes and Salem got nine. Thos. H. Tongue, of Hillsboro, Washington county, argued strongly in favor of Salem, and the member from Marion was also nobly sustained by leading men, such as F. D. McCully, of Joseph, W. J. Snodgrass, of La Grande, and others. Great credit is due Mr. Burnett for his energetic rattle and favorable showing for the Capital City. Another year and sentiment in favor of Salem will have grown so that no power can keep it away. Date set April 16.
