SUGGESTED COMMENT.

THE JOURNAL is in the swim with the "peeps."

Cruelty to animals does not pay anywhere—especially in Salem.

If the Etata is not sunk it is not the fault of the JOURNAL. It has followed her closer than the Charleston.

The sluggers who cannot pick up Peter Jackson find no difficulty in picking up the California newspapers.

In many fields there will not be a half crop of strawberries. Cultivation was not sufficient to withstand the drouth.

Uncle Sam would like a little more of the cream and a little less of the scum of Europe in the way of immigration.

It seems the sports are cautiously trying not to get knocked out by Peter Jackson. At the same time they fail to demolish Peter.

Portland ministers recommend consolidation. They wish to be understood that this is not to be considered as a movement for church-union.

If you will kindly offer to milk your neighbor's kicking cow when he is sick, he will spend no time quarrelling with you about what you believe on religious topics.

We are in receipt of a copy from the author, of "The People's Christ," by Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D. D. It is a volume of sermons, addresses and papers, printed by Lee & Shepard.

A great many men have no encouragement to offer a newspaper man in the shape of business until they make fools of themselves or get into trouble and then they encourage him to not burn them up.

There is no comfort in ill-fitting clothes, that you do not know what kind of material they are made of. All this uncomfortable feeling is avoided by ordering an all-wool suit made to fit at the Salem Woolen Mill store.

The democratic papers of Oregon are showing their devotion to free trade by carrying on a vigorous fight on protection all through the two years before there is any election in this state. Yet it is a question on which the democratic party itself is divided.

S. F. Chronicle on third party platform: The defect in the platform is that it is not open and above board as to matters which are recognized as real national issues or that it omits them altogether from consideration. The subject of internal revenue is not mentioned, nor is the matter of freedom and purity of elections. The demand for governmental control of railways is put in the alternative, so that it may mean something or nothing. The matter of the tariff is left untouched, unless it is to be implied from section 5, and such questions as the payment of the national debt and the public school system are wholly ignored.

The Dalles Chronicle: The Portland sugar merchants must be the smallest men on earth. A while ago they got scared to death because the only firm in The Dalles that buys from the refineries was reported as selling sugar half a cent a pound cheaper than they were. So they clubbed together and sent two of their number to San Francisco to fix things up with Claus Spreckles and it is to be inferred that they got satisfaction for a few days ago it was announced that they were now selling half a cent cheaper than The Dalles but they are not for the firm in question says they are able and willing to meet the Portland merchants at any price they may put on.

An Honest Heretic.

(Prepared for the JOURNAL.)

The resignation of Rev. Dr. Bridgman, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, of New York city, has excited considerable interest, and led to much editorial comment, some wise and some unwise. Dr. Bridgman has adopted certain views of future punishment, which are not in harmony with the general sentiment on that question among Baptists. Although bound by no written creed, and subject to no ecclesiastical superiors who might prosecute him for heresy, the eminent preacher has very commendably announced his change of convictions and resigned his charge. Many of the members of the church which he has served so long and faithfully, believing that his present opinions are not sufficiently divergent from consensus of belief in the denomination to warrant his separation from his brethren have urged him to withdraw his resignation, but the Dr. has very sensibly, we believe, decided to adhere to the course thus far pursued. His action has been kindly received by the leading men among the Baptists, as the following utterances will show. Says the New York Examiner, the leading Baptist paper, in a recent issue. The resignation of Rev. Dr. Bridgman is a manly act. Conscious that he had come to hold views regarding future retribution that has never found favor among Baptists, he was not willing to divide his church or to become a subject of denominational controversy. His retirement was the logical, the consistent, the Christian conduct that ought to be the rule in all such cases. Every man, ordained as well as unordained, has an unquestioned and unquestionable right to interpret the scriptures for himself, and to avow fearlessly the results of his study. If the result is to lead him to conclusions that seem to his brethren strange and even erroneous, no matter—he has the same right to his belief that they have to theirs. But to one thing he has no right; and that is, after his views have thus undergone change, to remain in an official position and undermine beliefs that he has solemnly vowed to teach and defend." Rev. Dr. Burgrave of Zion's Advocate, Portland, Maine, says concerning the same matter. "A minister should be honest with himself and with his people. If he has accepted views which are at variance with the generally accepted views of our churches, he should use his liberty, quietly withdraw and seek a field where by his preaching he can build up and not tear down. Accordingly it seems to us that Dr. Bridgman has done right in resigning the pastorate of the Madison Avenue church." No word has been said to denote anything but the kindest appreciation of the great services of Dr. Bridgman. He goes out from the church which he has so nobly served with love and respect of every man in it whose love and respect are worth the having. Is it not far better that he should thus go out than that he should take advantage of a position into which he was called while professing other views, and seek to tear down what he was called to build up?

There should be nothing incompatible between heterodoxy and honesty, yet when men who are high in authority and influence in orthodox churches, insist upon retaining their positions after having adopted views radically divergent from the views which they first professed, the views through which they attained their high positions, is there not encouragement for the view that laxity of belief begets laxity of word and deed. We commend the example of Dr. Bridgman to every man who finds himself out of harmony with general principles of the church whose doctrines he professes to believe.

FROM TURNER.

The pesky moth is now doing his work. Crops are generally all in and gardens are looking fine. The cold snap injured the peaches and cherries considerably. One of our enterprising farmers has put in 180 acres of grain this spring. The crow of the Mongolian pheasant is now heard by day and by night.

There is a great deal of sickness among young colts here and in the vicinity of Marion. There was a picnic held on Park's hill on Saturday. The young folks had a fine time. D. D. Prettyman is subpoenaed to appear in the United States court at Portland this week, in a damage suit against the Southern Pacific company.

The Stayton stage team started on a spin from Turner, on Tuesday last, running up the road. When about one and a-half miles on the way, each horse chose his own side of a small oak tree that stood in the road. They peeled the bark off the oak, left the stage here a complete wreck, and went on their way home.

One by one the charming patriotic stories of our childhood are proven to be myths. It is now asserted that Frederick the Great did not send Washington a sword inscribed "From the oldest general in the world to the greatest," or in fact, any sword; and further, that there isn't the slightest evidence for believing that Frederick was at all impressed with Washington's greatness.

MISCELLANY.

SEEKING REVENGE.

LONDON May 26.—The latest news from Africa has caused much excitement, both in London and Lisbon. A dispatch from the latter city states that the war feeling is again uppermost, and that the people are clamoring for revenge upon the British South Africa Company. This, for the moment, has diverted attention from the financial crisis, which makes it impossible for Portugal to make any formidable warlike demonstration. The English authorities are preparing to give a stunning reception to the two emissaries from the powerful African king, Gungunhema, whose territories are chiefly within the bounds claimed by Portugal. Gungunhema asks for British protection and declares that he wants to have nothing to do with the Portuguese. He is a brother-in-law to Lobengula, king of the Matabele, who sent a similar embassy to England some time ago, and was so astonished at the report brought back of the glories of Windsor castle and London that he did not believe them, and ordered them to be baked alive, from which fate they were saved by the truth. The missionary was horrified to learn later that the king had caused two of his slaves to be subjected to the fate intended for his emissaries, on the ground that, having given his word, somebody must perish.

AT MONTE CARLO.

LONDON, May 26.—It was a lucky day for the managers of the Monte Carlo casino, when, in studying how to avoid being bled by journalistic blackmailers, they hit on the plan of devoting a part of their ill-gotten gains to the formation of what Prince Bismarck would have called a "reptile fund," for the purpose of subsidizing the purchasable press in their interest. Since that time the world has been edified from time to time by circumstantial accounts of the most tremendous runs of luck on the part of frequenters of the Monte Carlo tables, and winnings have been reported as of common occurrence sufficient to break the bank, though it had been backed by the Rothschilds. That these ingenious baits have been swallowed is apparent from the increased attendance at the saloons. The latest story of the kind was to the effect that the Duchess of Montrose had left Monte Carlo richer by $250,000 francs than she arrived there. Following up this came a rush to the famous gambling place, the crowds being larger than ever known there before. The receipts of the bank in the past month have been something fabulous, and as one result there have been no less than seven suicides of ruined players since the first of May. The last self-murder to be recorded is that of a Bavarian banker, who is said to have lost a million francs of his own and his clients' money.

FROM RUSSIA.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 26.—Grand Duke Michael, uncle of the emperor, is about to retire from the office of president of the council of state. The grand duke is the father of the young Michael whose marriage to the Countess of Moremberg, without the consent of the czar, has caused so much trouble in the imperial family. Since the death of his wife, the Grand Duchess Olga, probably by poison, the grand duke has shown but little interest in affairs of state: During the gorgeous funeral, by which the czar tried to make up in some degree for his harshness to the late grand duchess, Michael was hardly able to totter by the side of the czar. He has ever since been in a condition of anguish, half bordering on insanity. In retiring from the council he takes from that important body the chief influence in favor of liberal measures, and leaves the reactionary element in control. The Grand Duke Vladimir, eldest brother of the czar, will succeed to the presidency. He is a pronounced Pan Slavist, a hater of the Jews, and even more of a Russian than the czar himself.
