WHAT WILL OREGON HAVE TO SHOW

A leading state newspaper has well said that for Oregon not to be represented at the world,s fair will be nothing short of a calamity. No greater calamity can befall a state than to be indifferent to its future prosperity. The individual and corporation promote their development or hinder the same by their conduct at certain critical periods.

So with city, state or nation. The critical time has come for Oregon. If Oregon does not double in wealth and population before the year two-thousand, it will be because her people now do not act to secure that end. If they do not now act they will wait two or three generations to see a development they might realize in five or seven years. The world's fair will be held this year, opening in May and closing in November. It may be, held two years, The best people in the United States will there assemble, not by thousands, but by millions. They will come from all over the world to see what the different states have to offer as an inducement for future investments. There is now no region for people o emigrate to and make new homes xcept the Pacific coast. Shall Ore gon stand still for the next ten years and let Washington and Calforula reap the golden harvest of increased wealth and population? ture to say whether Oregon shall stand still or go ahead. If the legislature does not act in this matter, what will Oregon have to show?

SUGGESTED COMMENT.

On the evening of the 2d was a social at the institute. A fine program was rendered, music and recitations followed by a character diaogue representing Irish, Negro, German and English. Mr. Wasson in a neat speech accepted the present but objected to being come at with shovel and tongs and had some doubt of the advisability of introducing such weapons into the family. Inspector Leak talked to the children a faw minutes during the evening, and about 10:30 taps sounded and soon all was as quiet as though noise had never been known,

This school is rapidly coming to the front under Prof. Wasson's management and there are applications for more than the school can hold and those here are well satisfied to stay. Only the best and brightest are kept, and unruly and tough ones are shipped back home to make room for their betters.

PETER'S PICTURE.

W'en Peter hed his pictur' took, W'en Peter hed his pictur'. He hed an agonizin look, His neck wus twisted in a crook Jest like a bow constricter;
His hair wux flyin all about,
Besides his tongue wux iollin out;
Seems if his ears they flopped an show
W'en Peter hed his pictur' took,
W'en Peter hed his pictur'.

W'en Peter hed his pictur' took,
W'en Peter hed his pictur'.
He said that he perposed to look
Jest like them pictur's in a book—
Jest like a Roman victor.
But his ol' whiskers stood out straight—
So straight a forty-seven pound weight
Couldn' pull 'em down—an there he set
With one eye open, 'tother shet,
W'en Peter hed his pictur' took,
W'en Peter hed his pictur'.

W'en Peter hed his pictur' took, W'en Peter hed his pictur',
He looked so desp'rit an forsook,
Hed sich a stranglin, chokin look
Just like a bow constricter,
An w'en the man showed him the proof,

An wen the man showed him the proof.
I thought that Peter'd raise the roof.
He couldn' control hisself at all,
But hed to set right down an bawl,
W'en Peter hed his pictur' took,
W'en Peter hed his pictur'.

Great Professors of the Past. Among the most famous physicians of the University of Alexandria were Cleombrotus, Herophilus and Erasistratus, and among the subor-It remains for the incoming legisla- dinate physicians was Philostephanus, who had charge of the natural history department of the museum and who wrote a book on fishes. The researches of the physicians were founded upon the only sure and certain basis of anatomy. They were authorized by the royal authority of Ptolemy to resort to the dissection of the dead and to ascertain by that only trustworthy method the correct structure of the human body. They were also authorized to make vivi-sections of criminals who had been condemned to death, in order that they might ascertain the mode in which the various functions of the body were performed. The convict contract labor scheme Among the improvements in suris to drop onto the legislature about with a bill to secians may be mentioned new opera tions for lithotomy, instruments for crushing calculi, for reducing dislocations, etc.—Westminster Review.

> An Old English Custom. Miss Strickland is good enough to tell us that it was formerly the cuswell written eight page New Year's tom in England for married people to keep the anniversaries of their wedding day, and on these occasions as many small mince pies were placed in one dish on the table as corresponded with the number of years that the husband had enjoyed conjugal felicity. In families where olive branches were numerous this pleasant custom must have proved the sweetest of boons for the juveniles and their friends. We have grown too grand in these days for such modest mince pie anniversaries, which have been superseded by silver and sometimes by golden weddings. Curiously enough, while plum porridge has entirely disappeared from our culinary economy, the preparation is still cited in American cookery books, and the recipe, ters were well acted, more especially even to the stoned prunes, is almost the plantation darkey. Then follow-precisely identical with that given

> The Skill of Adirondack Guides. The woodcraft of the Adirondack guides is peculiarly astonishing to those unskilled in such matters when displayed in all that pertains to open air cooking. A guide will disappear into a thicket and come back three minutes later supplied with two or three crotched saplings. With these, an ax and a deer knife, his only instruments, he will in five minutes more rig up a frame to suspend the kettle over the fire. While the kettle is boiling he will toast a great stock of bread or broil a spring chicken, and before these have cooled he will have brewed his coffee Whatever he does is well done, and with a celerity and apparent ease that make it seem mere play.—Pittsburg Press.
