THE BATTLESHIP OREGON.

The Democrat was the first paper to oppose the $10,000 subscription for a memorial for the battleship Oregon. Let them buy their own silver service.—Albany Democrat. It would not be surprising if the Democrat yet laid claim to having been the first to announce the ensignment in the Endicott garrison. The facts are, forty-five are the Statesmen, have been unanimously, religiously and industriously opposing the purchase of silver service by the citizens of Oregon for the battleship Oregon—and for any other equally useless purpose. We opposed it before the vessel was even started and never missed an opportunity to pronounce the whole scheme as one of uttermost pure and simple—Sales Statesman. When making the statement the Democrat had forgotten about the Statesman.—It is always first in its own estimation. The Democrat is very glad, though, to see it oppose such appropriations.—Albany Democrat.

There is no "appropriation" proposed for this purpose. The question is: The naval authorities having named a battleship after the state of Oregon, shall the people of Oregon give this fact the usual and customary recognition by presenting a costly silver service to the vessel?

The governor has appointed a committee of prominent gentlemen to discover a way to raise the $10,000 needed, as it is thought, to buy a suitable service. The governor was probably glad to be rid of the job, and the committee no doubt wish they were.

With the presentation of such an elaborate gift, a few of our "big" men would swell themselves up a little bigger, get their names in the papers, and a few cheeky newspaper men would probably be honored with a chance at the free lunch and punch bowl produced on such occasions.

As the navy is a kind of aristocratic institution that is of no earthly benefit to the farmers or poorer citizen, the capitalists, federal office-holders, bankers, politicians and corporations should raise this money and no doubt will.

There is no particular reason why taxpayers should oppose raising this money. Indeed the money should be raised by those interested and benefited. It is a proper thing to do, for the people of this state to show enterprise in this direction. But as a people we need good roads and better primary schools far more than we do battleships and ten thousand silver services.

The Corvallis Times keeps tearing to shreds the record of Wallis Nash as secretary of the Agricultural college, somebody's got more money to spend than Nash has.

The PORTLAND JOURNAL believes that cordwood is too cheap at $1.50 to $1.75 a cord. It does not represent half the labor cost.

Great Britain is going to have an election and the conservative leaders Balfour and Balfour are both pronounced bimetallists.

The new administration will be a great depression. Luxuries are at a discount. Necessities are at a premium. The newspapers above quoted only faintly express the feeling that the projectors of a $10,000 silver service for the battleship Oregon, are a set of impracticable visionaries and do not know what they are talking about.

A correspondent asks what is Orenco Herman's record on the silver question, and whether THE JOURNAL will support him for congress, if nominated. 1st. We understand Mr. Herman to be an unqualified advocate of the minting of silver. 2d. THE JOURNAL will support the right's Republican nominee for congress, as it has always done in the past.

The contributions to silver only when the last is passed could be another evidence that silver is not so highly prized as gold. Silver, the people think, is good enough for the poor, but gold is too precious to give, even to the Lord.—Hamburg Philanthropic.

In order to avoid the silver question the national convention of Republicans was willing to avoid every silver question. That is not the way the national convention of the party will do.

Republicans are going to stand together for a sound metallic money system with a basis of intrinsic value.

POPULISTS AND METALLIC MONEY.

Populists should get over the fallacy and inconsistency of being advocates of metallic money, gold and silver, to 1, or at any other commercial ratio, when at the same time they demand fiat money that is to be irredeemable and loaned to the people at 2 per cent.

They demand this latter as one of the fundamental doctrines of the Omaha platform. They also pretend to demand the coinage of gold and silver 16 to 1. Thus they demand a flat money system and at the same time are asking for a uniting money system, as advocated by the Republican party, which has always taught that all paper money shall be redeemed in metalлическое of intrinsic value.

Some of the Populist papers and speakers are free to confess that they do not really believe in metal money based on intrinsic value, but regard it as only a bait to catch votes with. Ask them how they will raise the revenue to run the government and pay the national debt with, and right there they will come right out and say, "Issue some more paper money."

Populists ignore or deny the importance of a protective tariff, or they are free traders out and out. They would not only pay the national debt with that money, but many of them would pay the current expenses of the government—about $400,000,000 a year—in this irredeemable paper money; or, at least, if they have any rational theory of raising funds to defray the expenses of this government, we have never heard of it.

We would like some intelligent Populists tell us how they can reconcile the apparent inconsistency of being advocates of the old Omaha flat money theory and at the same time of being advocates of the doctrine of metallic money on a basis of intrinsic value. We confess to being unable to comprehend that there is any possibility of having the two systems at the same time.

It is daily becoming more evident that Steve Elkins desires to engage eligible quarter on the ground floor of any administration the Republican party may nominate.—Albany Telegram.

Wouldn't you support him? He is a goldbug silver straddler corporation wrecker of star route fame. The Telegram and the Oregonian would go wild over him.
