BADLY BRUISED.—Sunday afternoon as the "little" motor cars were passing down Commercial street, returning from the balloon ascension, the 8-year-old son of Mrs. Lane, who lives near the Baptist church, attempted to jump from one of the "trailers."

The car was moving quite rapidly and the boy was thrown to the hard pavement, striking on his head and shoulders, sustaining thereby some very painful bruises.

A FINE RECORD.—Salem has a woman farmer in Mrs. Thos. Hubbard of whose record many a voting farmer might well be proud.

Last Saturday she sold 2000 bushels of oats at 31¢ and 32¢ per bushel, the highest price so far realized. Besides this Mrs. Hubbard made big sales of her famous hay on the same day.

Phenomenal Rush.

While every body is enjoying the benefits to some extent of reviving trade since the grand harvest time is over, there is one business house in Salem that is reaping a harvest of trade that exceeds all previous experiences.

Reference is made to the New York Racket store, which since the hop picking rush is over has done a land office business. Twelve regular clerks are employed at this store, and the cash sales must be something enormous.

Extra clerks are secured for special occasions, as several experienced hands are nearly always busy ordering and unpacking goods. Keeping their stock replenished is a great point with Mr. Barnes, and one which seems to please his immense trade.

Great crowds throng the store constantly.

A MOTHER'S MEETING.—The Child Study Club will meet on Thursday, September 23rd, at 3 o'clock in the parlors of the First Congregational church. All interested in "Child Study" are invited to come.

PICKPOCKETS.

Another Yew Park Burglary—Others Police Court News.

Sunday evening a young man of this city, whose name the police court officials did not learn, called at police headquarters and reported having been the victim of some pickpockets at the fair grounds during the balloon ascension in the afternoon. His pockets were picked of about $16. The young man was considerably poorer financially last evening, but he had gained some valuable experience. When he goes to such a place again, he will in all probability leave his "spare change" at home.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Baxter in Yew Park, was entered for the second time, last Friday evening and thoroughly ransacked, a number of silk handkerchiefs and articles of clothing were taken from the residence. Mr. Baxter's house was also entered on Thursday evening, September 9.

Ed Williams was re-arrested Saturday night. Williams had only been released on Friday for vagrancy promising to leave town immediately. When searched at police station a huge rock weighing fully two pounds was found in his coat pocket. Williams is one of the fellows who assaulted Chief of Police Dilley on the evening of Decoration Day and is considered a desperate character by local police officials.

There are no new developments in the recent Yew Park burglaries. W. J. Huffman called at the office of Chief Dilley and identified the jewelry taken from Frank Bailey as that taken from his residence. Bailey, who is in the county jail awaiting the action of the grand jury, is unquestionably guilty of the crime with which he is charged. That Bailey had accomplices is evident from the fact that Wm. Baxter's house was re-entered on Friday evening last.

The work of pickpockets at the fair grounds Sunday afternoon only emphasizes the necessity of an increased police force during the session of the state fair at least that the residents of the city and visitors attending the fair may be afforded protection from this class of lawbreakers.

During fair week large numbers of questionable characters gather in Salem and their work is already in evidence. Chief Dilley this morning remarked to a JOURNAL reporter that it would be necessary for an increased number of policemen to insure reasonable protection from the "tough" element that will be in the city during the next few weeks.

A Man Threshed.

James H. Portland, boarded the South Salem electric car Sunday at 1:40. There were two ladies and a child aboard. When Motorman Mothorn went around to collect fares they had some words over making change. Penland could not get satisfaction so he went around onto the front platform and as the car was going down the steep grade of Gaiety Hill he clinched, the motorman whose hands were occupied running the car.

The car was going pretty fast, and the women screamed and prepared to jump for their lives. Mothorn shut off the power, put on the brake, loosened Penland's grip and put him off. The two men fought until separated, when Penland, though disfigured, was still game. The passengers returned to their seats and the car went on.

The bystanders and patrons of the line seemed to be of one opinion that the motorman did right, as Penland had been drinking and there was no other way to settle the matter.

His fellow journalists are also under arrest on a like charge and the matter will finally be disposed of in the United States Court.
